"The vacuum in the condenser fell to twenty inches. This was caused by the ship passing through shoal water from Norfolk through the channel to Hampton Roads, by which her condenser was filled with mud. This vitiated the vacuum and resulted in a corresponding loss of horse-power, which the contractors very properly will not allow. This will be rectified by taking off the bonnets and washing out the condenser with the fire hose. There is nothing serious in this. The firerooms are hot, the blowers not yet working properly and the engines require turning up before going in a full-power trial."

encampment at Louisville. Caplinger and his wife and six children did not live harmoniously together before he entered the home, and his visit here at this time was to effect a reconciliation. His wife and children would not consent to his return.

On Sunday, Mrs. Caplinger was standing in the front yard, leaning over the gate, and her husband was standing behind her. He entreated her to take him back, but she refused. He then drew a revolver, and, placing it at her head, clicked the trigger, which drew Mrs. Caplinger's attention, when she grabbed his arm. He pulled the trigger and fired, and the ball entered her right shoulder. Then he fired again at her back. The ball struck a steel in her corset, which saved her life. The children in the house heard the two shots and ran out just in time to grab their father's arm as he pulled the trigger which sent a ball into his own head. The jerk on his arm changed the direction of the ball, so that it did not prove fatal at once, though there is not much hope of his recovery.

George Caplinger served as a Union solder in a Kentucky cavalry regiment during the war. After the war he was chief of police in Shelbyville, Ky., for a number of years, Twelve years ago he came to Clinton with his family. Rev. Herbert G. Leonard Gets It and is Proud of It.

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—There was great excitement in Hyde Park Methodist circles last night over the report that Rev. Herbert G. Leonard, pastor of the leading church in that fashlouable suburb, had mysteriously received the papal blessing from Mgr. Satolli. It is said that the ablegate blessed the Rev. Leonard in the name of the Pope as a function at the convent of the Sacred Heart to which the Methodist minister had been invited.

Rev. Leonard admitted to a reporter that it was true. He sad he had received the blessing and that he was proud of it. Asked when he intended to leave the Methodist church to embrace Catholicism, he said he would rather not talk on that subject.

Later, H. W. Harris, Andrew Fowler and Paul Hyde, deacons of the church, were informed what had taken place and they lost no time in calling upon their pastor and demanding an explanation. It was a decidedly stormy interview and the Rev. Leonard did not know which way to turn to escape the fire of scathing questions that were hurled at him from all directions. His first excuse was that it was all a joke. He said he had never been interviewed by a newspaper man and hardly knew what he said. Then the reporter was called in and asked to produce his notes of questions and answers.

day was celebrated here today in a manner which far eclipses any previous effort on the part of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Sacramento was iterally packed with people. Over twenty thousand came in on the trains between Saturday night and this morn-ing. The parade was the greatest ever seen in Northern California. It was a seen in Northern California. It was a brilliant spectacle. Fully a dozen brass bands and as many more drum corps furnished music on the march. Nearly four thousand people were in the procession, which included several parlors of Native Daughters. Each par-wore a distinctive uniform. Suits white and white parasols predominated. A large force of militiamen ap-peared in the parade, and among the prominent persons in the carriages were Lieut.-Gov. Millard, Private Secretary McCabe, who apressed for Gov. Budd, whose illness prevented his presence; Assistant Adjutant-General Peeler and Mayor Steinman. At the conclusion of the parade, literary exercises were held in the Plaza where and were held in the Plaza, where an address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Steinman, followed by an oration by William M. Conley. During the afternoon a reception was held at Sutter's Fort, and receptions were held at the various headquarters.

the afternoon a reception was held at Sutter's Fort, and receptions were held at the various headquarters.

There were by actual count 3577 Native Sons and Daughters in line, and the parade was more than three miles long. It was the largest turnout ever witnessed in Sacramento, and was also the most unique. Seen from an elevation at a distance the line was a marvelous combination of brilliant colors, gold, green and crimson predominating.

The houses in the business quarter of the city, and along the three miles of the route were literally covered with carnival bunting of prismatic hues. There was a brass-band and a drum corps to every block, and the air was resonant with melody. The streets were crowded as they were never so much before, and it is estimated that there were at least 40,000 visitors. there were at least 40,000 visitors.

As an instance of the rush, it may be stated that the Southern Pacific officials made preparations for carrying 250 people on this morning's excursion train from Woodland, but 600 people bought tickets at Woodland and Davis-into service. The San Francisco parlors turned out in large force, while the country parlors made up in the variety of the costumes and paraphernalia for what they may have lacked in numerical strength.

The day was an ideal one, a cool breeze from the river tempering the heat of the brilliant sunshine. Some parlors paraded in costumes of pure white, Native Sons and Daughters walking together, open order, under Japanese parasols. Others carried gigantic leaves of the California fan paim and Chinese lanterns. Others paraded gantic leaves of the California fan palm and Chinese lanterns. Others paraded as miners with glittering picks and gold pans and scarlet shirts that seemed to set the streets in flame. All these unique features made the scene truly oriental. It was as if California had taken a leaf out of Lallah Rookh and had personified it with the bravest and most gallant of her youth and the fairest and most lovable of her daughters.

Everything is given up to joility and good-fellowship. But very few have gone away. They remained to take in the great electric carnival tonight, when the State Capitol blazed into the night like a new constellation, brighter than a thousand Siriuses.

The ploneers this afternoon banqueted the grand officers of the Native Sons, and the city has been thrown open to the order. In spite of the vast crowds of visitors not an accident was reported. Among the amusements this afterncon was a regatta on the river, which was an interesting spectacle.

THE NIGHT DISPLAY. THE NIGHT DISPLAY.

THE NIGHT DISPLAY.

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 9.—Aladdin and his lamp could not have conjured up a more brilliant demonstration than was seen in Sacramento tonight. California's capital city was aflood with light, a light which rivalled the moon. The people were celebrating the introduction of a mighty electric power, generated at Folsom, twenty-two miles away, and brought here in sufficient quantity to turn ail the wheels of commerce and illuminate every house.

It was a carnival night in every sense of the word. Magnificent arches spanned the main streets and they bore such legends as "Progress," "The New Sacramento," and "Welcome." Then there was a huge electric horseshoe, composed of several hundreds of lamps, spanning one of the principal streets. The Capitol building was a vision of light and loveliness. Its graceful lines were outlined with many hundreds of electric lamps and the great dome was in a perfect blaze. All the trees in front of the building were covered with incandescent lamps in carnival colors, cherry red, apple green and poppy yellow, making them look like an enormous collection of Christmas trees.

At the main entrance to the Capitol was a large reviewing stand, over which appeared in letters of light the names of the ploneers in electricity, Franklin, Morse and Edison. Many thousands of people were assembled in front of the Capitol. The streets were literally packed with people. There was no room on the sidewalks and it was with the greatest difficulty that a passageway could be cleared to permit the parade to pass.

The parade itself was one of the novelties in the history of the world. There were about twenty-five floats, all brilliantly illuminated and all representative of progress. There was, among other things, a great American flag formed with electric lamps. Then there were fountains throwing up sprays of water amidst a myriad of colored globes. There was a national float carrying the Goddess of Liberty and illuminated with scores of bright-hued lamps.

The industrial part of the parade was lineted with scores of bright-nucl lamps.

The industrial part of the parade was under the direction of men from the railroad shops, who had fifteen floats, representing the various departments any all typical of the class of work they represented. The shops had one thousand men in the line. Grand Marshal A. J. Johnston and his aides wore white uniforms with carnival-colored capes.

The ladies have been busy all day at the headquarters of the W.R.C. The colored veterans are being treated with especial consideration. Gov. J. Y. Brown and other State officials came over from Frankfort to assist in welcoming the visitors.

After holding all-day receptions, Gen. Lawler and staff, at 6 o'clock, dined with Col. H. S. Cohn, and at 8 o'clock was formally presented to President Sherley of the Citizens' Committee.

Ransom Post of St. Louis and the Cincinnati posts serenaded the party at the Sherley mansion, where a brilliant social event was in progress.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The World says that the oft-repeated rumor, that Mrs. Langtry, the actress, was seeking a divorce from her husband, from whom she has been separated for many years, is again revived. The application will be filed, it is said, in the California courts, Mrs. Langtry having a residence in Lake county, that State.

H. Hummel, her counsel, said: "I can say that the suit has not yet been brought. I will neither confirm nor deny the story. I have received a communication from Mrs. Langtry," he added, "dated Baden Baden, where she now is. If the suit is brought, it will be the first time she has tried to blegally freed from her husband. Her divorce in California courts will be effective anywhere."

BALTIMORE, (Md.,) Sept. 9.—Rev.
Father Zonus Barnum, who was recently returned from the interior of Alaska, where he spent four years in missionary work among the natives, gave to the Baltimore Sun an interview elating to the boundary dispute be-relating to the boundary dispute between the United States and Great Britain.

"The claim made by the British government at the instance of the Canadians," said he, "embraces a valuable strip of land, a part of which is a key to the vast interior of Alaska, possessing rich mineral resources. Another portion would give control of fine natural harbors and in a third place they would obtain one of the most magnificent scenic regions of the world, Glacier Bay, which is now beginning to be visited by thousands of tourists from all over the world during the winter months.

be visited by thousands of tourists from all over the world during the winter months.

"Although the immense value of this land cannot be accurately determined, a knowledge of its geographical position on the coast shows that great commercial advantages should accrue in the future from its possession by this country. It is a long narrow slice, running the whole length of the narrow circular district of Alaska that is nearest to this country. It is most temperate in climate and the only part of the country that is settled by any considerable number of white men.

"One important effect of Great Britain's claims, if they should be allowed, would be that Great Britain would have control of the route which is the key to the goldfields on the northeast corner of Alaska. These fields pan out about $100,000 each year, but it has been stated that there are rich prospects there yet unworked as well as other mineral resources which, when they become well known, will likely cause considerable immigration there."

Averadi, representing the Vatican, is shortly expected here, but the Liberal press is bitterly opposed to his being officially received by the government, as it would be the recognition of the Catholic church, against which there is a bitter feeling here among the radical members of the Liberal party on account of the attack on the public schools by the priests.

At the Sunday bullfights at Pachuca, bulls of inferior quality were introduced by the management and as they showed little fight the audience, composed in part of English and Mexicans, became infurfated and began to tear up the ring and assault the police with chairs. The disturbance was finally quieted.

The papers are attacking the parochial schools, insisting that children are educated in anti-Liberal ideas and the schools are consequently an obstacle to the progress of the nation. There is certain to be tremendous excitement raised by the war now going on between the Catholics and Liberals on the public-school question.

President Diaz is taking deep interest in the movement for the improvement of the breed of horses and also in the movement to promote the popularization of the science of horticulture.

A number of American residents want the missionaries to abandon the plan to circulate the daily papers during the coronation of the Virgin of Guadaloupe fetes, attacking the popular Catholic bellef. There is much excitement in clerical circles over what they term the American interference in the great national religious celebrations. It is feared that this action on the part of the missionaries will revive the rapidly dying-out prejudice against Americans.

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.) NEW YORK, Sept. 9.- The chief discussion among the yachtsmen today was the weather tomorrow. All hoped for a good breeze for the triangular race so as to try the yachts in conditions as different as possible from those of Sat-urday. The Weather Bureau, however, holds out small hopes, the prognostica-tion being for fair weather with light to fresh winds, generally southeasterly and slightly cooler. There were no signs of winds from the west, and inditions as on Saturday, except that there

At an informal meeting of the New York Yacht Club, the Regatta Committee delegated James R. Busk to represent the Cup Committee on board the Valkyrie III at tomorrow's race. It was also learned that David Henderson, Lord Dunraven's friend, will represent the British interests on board the Defender. No official action of any other kind in connection with the race was taken.

The preparatory signal gun will be fired at 10:50, and the starting gun at 11 o'clock. The boats will have two minutes in which to cross the line and

His fifteen-foot sloop, the Spruce IV, was also on board. morrow will print the following interview with Capt. Cranfield:

"We do not think that one race wins the series by any means," said Capt. Cranfield last night. "Saturday's race was no true test of the respective merits of the boats. We labored under great disadvantage. These excursion steamers gave us all their back-wash and particularly hampered us on the run home. I think it is an outrage the way they treated us. We are here for sport, and we have a good boat, but if they interfere with our sailing as they did on Saturday we will never find out what the boats can do."

"Do you think you will stand a better chance if there is a good, stiff breeze?" was asked.

"Indeed I do," said Capt. Cranfield. "Give us a good, stiff breeze, and we will win sure. I think the Valkyrie will do well in stiff weather. If the wind had not shifted to the south Saturday the Valkyrie would surely have turned the mark first. A race in such a fluky wind is no test at all."

PALL MALL GAZETTE'S JUDG-MENT, LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Pall Mall

Gazette this afternoon, in commenting on the international yacht race of Saturday, says: "We fear there is no America's cup this year for Lord Dunraven. The chief defect of the Valkyrie III, to which we have referred on several occasions, is the fuss she makes going through the water. The conditions of the first match, therefore, were much against her. With a calm surface, she may do better, but in stronger winds she is not likely to do so well. English yachtsmen may console themselves as best they can with the recollections of the Britannia's triumphs. over the Navahoe and Vigilant."

In another place the Pall Mail Gazette says: "The excursion steamers following the yachts behaved even more disgracefully than usual, but there is no suggestion that they hampered one of the boats more than the other. Perhaps the most disappointing feature," adds the Gazette. "is the Defender's gain on the broad reach home when there was no rough water."

All the London papers dwell upon the crowding of the courses by the excursion steamers.

The Sun says: "There is no nation that we would rather take a beating from than America, especially as probably no other could administer it."

The Star says that the defeat of the Valkyrie III is far from being a disastrous one, and that there is no need to lose hope.

The Evening News does not see much hope that the Valkyrie III will will in the coming matches. This paper also comments upon the enormous expense of building and equipping the Defender, whose success, it says, is another triumph of the almightly dollar.

The Globe says: "Englishmen generally will be ready to echo the straightforward verdict of Lord Dunraven's report that we were fairly beaten."

The St. James Gazette finds small comfort for English yachtsmen in the result of the first heat.

MIDNIGHT INDICATIONS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The indications at midnight are that the weather will be favorable tomorrow for the second race between the British yacht Valkyrie III, and the Defender. Forecaster Dunn says that the outlook now is that there will be fresh south winds and a clear sky. At this hour the wind is blowing from the southwest at the rate of twenty miles an hour off Sandy Hook. At Long Branch the sky is clear and the wind is blowing at the rate of nineteen miles an hour, Atlantic City reported a twelve-mile wind and a clear sky.

This afternoon both yachts went out for a trial spin. The Valkyrie III left her anchorage at Red Hook at 2 o'clock, under ifb and mainsail, making the quarantine station in one-half hour. She then tacked across the Narrows, beating down the bay again on the port tack. At 2:30 o'clock she returned through the Narrows, running free under the same sail. THE LEAGUE PENNANT. A Close Race, With Baltimore in the

BALTIMORE, (Md.,) Sept. 9.—The race for the National League pennant is still full of possibilities for at least three of the contestants, and while the home team is having a clear lead it is by no means out of the woods. The champions and Phillies have each fifteen scheduled games to play, while the Spiders have but ten. Baltimore's percentage is now .655, Cleveland .627, Philadelphia .596. If both Baltimore and Cleveland should lose all their remaining games and the Phillies won all theirs it would stand: Baltimore, .576; Cleveland, .578; Philadelphia .648. If both Baltimore and Cleveland lose five games the percentage will be: Baltimore, .556; Cleveland, .617, but if Cleveland wins all the remaining games and Baltimore loses five, the race will be a tie, at .656.

If, upon the other hand, Baltimore wins five games and Cleveland does the same thing, then the score will stand: Baltimore, .516; Cleveland, .517. To win the pennant in such an event Philadelphia would have to capture twelve of her fifteen games, giving her .520. Combinations of this kind can be made without limit on the remaining games, and they are interesting in that they show that even now there is at least a possible chance for a triangular contest toward the end of the race. First Congregational Church in that suburb. Miss Ayres was completely hypnotized by the strains of the organ and she finally went into a hypnotic trance, from which she was resuscitated with great difficulty. Miss Ayres was sitting in the very center of the church, and her peculiar actions created the greatest excitement. As soon as the strains of the organ were heard those sitting near Miss Ayres noticed that she half rose in her seat, as if to change her position. Then she seemed to think better of it, and sat down again. In a moment those in the same pew noticed that her fingers were twitching nervously, and that her face became so red as to be nearly purple. A lady sitting in the pew behind asked Miss Ayres if she could give her any assistance. She turned to reply to the well-meant inquiry, but no words came from her lips. She seemed to be making a desperate struggle with some emotion, and her whole body was now twitching.

Suddenly the blood left Miss Ayres's face, as it had come, and left her as pale as death itself. She made an attempt to rise, wavered, tried to catch herself on the pew in front, and fell headlong into the aisle, which startled every one on that side of the church. An usher at once rushed to her assistance. He attempted to raise her to her feet, but she had stiffened until every muscle seemed strained to the highest tension. Her eyes were wide open, with a fixed and glassy stare, and those around for a moment feared she had been the victim of a sudden attack of heart disease. She was carried out of the audience-room to the cpen air, where it was thought she would at once recover. But she was as invention of "Where am I?" was asked by Miss Ayres, as soon as she had recovered consciousness sufficiently to become aware of what was going on about her.

When told of the circumstances which brought her where she was, Miss Ayres said: "I have been taken that way before. The doctors say it is pressure of blood on the brain." Aftermaking this admission, Miss Ayres suddenly relapsed into silence, declaring that she felt all right now, and walked unaided out of the church, when questioned about the occurrence, said that after the service Miss Ayres came to him to inform him that she had been uninjured by her experience and explained to him the cause of her remarkable actions.

"It would seem," said Dr. Loba; "that Miss Ayres has for a long time been suffering with brain trouble, but that it does not affect her unless she happens to hear the strains of a church organ."

Not only are such cases of frequent occurrence, but the customs officials at Beyrout have stopped a consignment of 16,000 Bibles and other books duly authorized to circulate in the empire, on the pretext that each book has to bear the stamp of the Ministry of Public Instruction, this being quite contrary to the contract existing on the subject between the United States and the Porte, Mr. Terrill, the American Minister, addressed a note to the Porte protesting against this violation of the contract and demanding the release of the consignment in question.

Lord Archibald Campbell and his Highland pipers marched through Glencoe tonight, playing a dirge. Lord Archibald devised this project as an explation for the historical messacre of Glencoe by the Campbells. The project, however, was not accepted by the 'inhabitants of the glen in the splrit in which it was intended, and the descendants of the massacred clan gave his lordship notice that if he or any others belonging to the clan who murdered their ancestors should attempt a demonstration in Glencoe they would break their heads. Lord Archibald, however, determined to put through his project and asked for police protection.

It was feared that the proposed demonstration would revive the old feud between the clans, but the march through the glen was accomplished tonight without disorder. The McDonalds gave no sign of approval, but they made no hostile demonstration.

REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—An evening paper prints a sensational story about the defense which will be offered in the trial of Theodore Durrant for the murder of Blanche Lamont. The following statement is credited to a person connected with the defense:
"The alibi will be strong, but the defense has witnesses to show that Durrant not only did not commit the murder, but will indicate who did commit There will be more than one implicated in the murder. Witnesses will testify that they saw the girl in the testify that they saw the girl in the church on the fatal afternoon with a certain man and that at that time a second man was in the church. There the defense will rest its inquiry. It will not attempt to prove that these parties did commit the murder. The statements as to this are so direct that they will leave no ground for the prosecution to stand on so far as Durrant is concerned."

ecution to stand on so far as Durrant is concerned."

NO OPTICAL ILLUSIONS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—The story of Blanche Lamont's last journey will be fully told in Judge Murphy's courtroom during the present week. Many details which the prosecution was unable to supply at the preliminary examination will be forthcoming and the proceedings will furnish a dramatic interest strongly in contrast to the mathematical monotony of the past week. Eyes were on the young schoolgirl and her escort on that April afternoon and the owners of these eyes will tell of the steps they saw taken on that tragic journey. Eyes were on the unsuspecting girl and the young man supposed to be Durrant when they boarded the car at Powell and Clay streets and when they entered the Bartlett-street church from which one of them was never to emerge alive. Theowners of those eyes will tell their story fully believing that their organs of vision were not deceived. Attorneys for the defense will stoutly content that they are mistaken; that their eyes have played them false and that it was not Durrant, but some other person they saw with Blanche Lamont.

In two cases, at least, there has been no concealment that Durrant's attorneys would directly attack the clearness of vision of the witnesses on the ground that there was a plain physical defect in their eyes. These two, by the way, are the most important witnesses for the prosecution, Mrs. Mary Vogel and Mrs. Caroline Leak. The prosecution has been aware of this intention for some time and preparation has been made to frustrate it. In the case of Mrs. Leak, that lady, it is understood, has confided to the police that on the day Durrant and the jury visited the church she was easily able to identify the defendant in the crowd on the sidewalk from her window. She had not been previously notified of his coming, but the moment the party took up its stand on the sidewalk opposite she is said to have picked the prisoner out immediately. Mrs. Hackett, there's Theodore Durrant."

Mrs. Leak has not been will undoubtedly go a long way to establish the competency of Mrs. Leak's vision.

With Mrs. Vogel the test has been even more severe. On Saturday morning her eyes were examined by Optician Muller and his assistant, Harry Clark. They put her to all the tests known to the business, and at the end of the examination pronounced her eyes to be in good condition. They will testify, if called upon the stand, that Mrs. Vogel could easily distinguish from her window the features of a man standing in front of the Normal School.

"I happened to return to the store," said Muller, "while Mr. Clark was examining Mrs. Vogel's eyes. He explained the case to me, and I made an examination myself. I found that with her left eye she is capable of seeing all she claims to have seen. There is a slight near-sightedness in that organ. The right eye is a little more so. Without glasses she read test type calculated to be discernible to the normal eye at fifty feet, at twenty. With the refraction of both eyes corrected by the two lenses she was able to read the test type at twenty feet at exactly that distance.

"As I said before, she read the fifty-two lenses she was able to read the test type at twenty feet at exactly that distance.

"As I said before, she read the fifty-foot test type at twenty feet with the left eye. With the right she could not do so, but you bear this in mind, where there is different power of the eyes, the better always controls. If both eyes were like her right eye she would not have been able to distinguish features for the distance across Powell street; that is, there might be some doubt about it. There is no doubt, however, that with her left eye controlling as it does, she is able to do what she says she has done.

"With an opera glass?" queried Muller, in response to a question: "why, with a good opera glass any defect in her vision for that distance would be overcome—more than overcome."

The question concerning the effect of opera glasses was put for the reason that Mrs. Vogel has made an additional statement to the police that she used a pair of lenses in watching the young man walking in front of the Normal School. She did not trust her eyes alone. She was so excited over the actions of the man, whom she firmly set down as a suspicious charactor, that she desired to be absolutely positive as to his identity. After watching him for a long time she suddenly bethought herself of the glasses. She placed them to her eyes. She leveled the lenses at the man across the way. Every lineament showed in the circle she noted and that is the reason why she is so positive that she cannot be mistaken in the man.

A RUINED TALE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—(Special Dispatch.) Another story concerning the "mysterious woman" in the Durrant case was spoiled last night. Miss Ida M. Clayton, a teacher in a Redding primary school, ruined the tale. In a dispatch from Los Angeles received in this city last Saturday it was stated that Mrs. Maud Callender of that city had indirectly given the police information that Miss Ida M. Clayton of No. 1225 Pine street, this city knew the "mysterious woman." The dispatch further stated that Capt. Lees had been notified of the matter. Capt. Lees was seen by a reporter, and immediately denied that he had received any such telegram. Efforts to interview Miss Clayton proved fruitless, for the reason that she was out of town for a few days and no one knew the address. Last night she returned. She had been paying a visit to Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Beach, at Twenty-third avenue station, Oakland. She was seen shortly after her return, and promptly denied the story.

"I know no woman connected with the Durrant case," she said. "I do not know Mr. Durrant, and I have never seen him. I do not know any one who knows him, or any one who knows any of his acquaintances. I have never lived in the Mission and never attended that church. All I know of the case has been gleaned from the newspapers.

has been gleaned from the newspapers.

"How that story got out," Miss Clayton continued, referring to the Los Angeles telegram, "I cannot understand. Mrs. Maud Callender is my niece, and it may have been that while she and my mother were visiting in San Luis Obispo they talked about the case and this story of the mysterious woman was mentioned among other things. It may have been that my mother said that she had read of it in the newspapers, and Mrs. Callender may have come to the conclusion that I knew all about it. My mother certainly did not say that I knew the person or anything about her.

I knew the person or anything about her.

"I do not say, either, that Mrs. Callender reported the matter to the Los Angeles police. I think her name must have come to them in a roundabout way, as those things sometimes do, and then when they saw her, if they did, she may have stated that she thought my mother had mentioned that I had heard of the woman. I have never heard of her, however, and, as I said before, I know nothing about her, or Mr. Durrant, or the case further than what I have seen in the papers."

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)

SAN JOSE, Sept. 9.—Fire which started at 2 o'clock this morning in the barn on the Reinhardt estate destroyed the extensive planing mill of the Santa Clara Mill and Lumber Company, three Reinhardt flats and two other dwellings. The loss is $175,000. The building was consumed before anything could be saved. An attempt was made by Watchman Smith of the mill to bring the fire apparatus of the mill into use before the department arrived, but it did little or no good, as the fire enveloped the buildings in a few seconds and spread more and more, and the four handsome flats of the Reinhardt estate were soon beyond help. Three of them were entirely consumed and the other one was badly scorched. Just before the fire was under control fears were entertained that the entire block would be burnt to the ground. A crowd collected and offered their help in removing the furniture of the houses in danger. Quite a number of visiting wheelmen were on the scene and lent their aid in the good work. Planos, bedding and household furniture littered the sidewalks all around the scene of the fire.

The firemen, for some unexplained reason, could not readily locate the hydrants, and, even after they had made connections, the stream appeared to have little effect. The San Jose Mill and Lumber Company's plant was destroyed, and the loss on this alone will reach a large sum, probably $75,000 or $100,000 at least. The plant was insured for $70,000. Other losses will bring the total up to $150,000. The fire was brought under control at 2 o'clock this morning. JOSE, Sept. 9.—Fire which at 2 o'clock this morning in the

Taken From the City of Sydney Charged with Crime.

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—The steamer City of Sydney which arrived from Panama tonight brought full particulases of the capture of Florencio Bustamente, one of Antonio Ezeta's favorite lieutenants, by the Salvador authorities. It is supposed by the Spanish-Americans who came up on the City of Sydney that he has been torn to pieces by an infuriated mob or publicly shot in the streets of the city of San Salvador long before this.

The surrender of Bustamente by the people of Nicaragua came by way of return for the friendly act of Salvador in the Corinto affair. The arrest of Bustamente while aboard an American ship is said to be in direct violation of international law, and the turbulent little Central American republic may be called to account for its high-handed action by the United States. Capt. Johnston of the City of Sydney refused to discuss the matter, saying that he could not do so until he had first consulted his superiors.

Bustamente was found after much difficulty. He was hiding under the coal-bunkers. Though he knew he was going to his death when he left the steamer, he never uttered a reproach. He declared that he should remain Ezeta's friend to the last.

The steamship company had no other course than to turn over Bustamente, for warrants charging him with crime were presented, and the government of Salvador, which gives a subsidy to the Pacific Mail Company, made a formal demand for his surrender.

Concerning the fact that a consular agent of the United States was on the steamer when Bustamente was formally selzed, there is little to say. This consular agent was a Mr. Cooper, who is at La Libertad, in the interest of the mally seized, there is little to say. This consular agent was a Mr. Cooper, who is at La Libertad, in the interest of the cable company. It is maintained that he was aboard the steamer, not in his consular capacity, but as representing the cable company. He took no hand in the matter in any way, and did not direct the surrender of Bustamente, as some of the passengers supposed. Bustamente was well known in San Francisco, as he was under arrest here as one of the Salvadorean refugees.

There was an interesting service at the Travis Park Methodist Church at San Antonio, Tex., Sunday, when nineteen converts were formally received into the church. Among them were Mme. Claude Duval, who ran a notorious resort and who was converted during the revival, and Mrs. H. Hightower, an inmate of Mme. Duval's house. There was a large congregation and both these converts got a warm welcome into the Christian fold. Plans are being developed for converting Mme. Duval's house into a home for reformed fallen women.

Kate Kane, the first female to be admitted to the bar in Chicago, and who has since gained a national reputation through her defense of noted criminals, is a bride, and what is more, has been married for nearly two months. Her husband is Signor Vincenso Rossi, who is said to be of rich and distinguished family and who is well known among Italians in Chicago. The couple were married in Kenosha, Wis. Mrs. Rossi Sunday night explained that the wedding had been secret because she and her husband wished to avoid undue publicity and it would have been impossible to invite all her friends to a wedding.

A Salt Lake dispatch says that the mine in Nye county, Nev., over which the recent fight took place between the owners and a band of desperadoes, in which two of the latter were killed, is the property of the Sterling Mining Company and is owned by Utah men. Hon. Orson Smith of Logan, Utah, is the president, and Hugh Cannon of Salt Lake is secretary. Smith and Cannon are both at the mine. The desperadoes took possession last week, driving out the men in the employ of the Sterling Company. Phil Foote, one of the men killed, is well known in Salt Lake, and it is said that he recently escaped from officers here.

any outdoor exercise. Very many get mo exercise at all. Modes of dressing interfere with the proper muscular action and with the circulation of the blood. All the hygienic laws are broken. It is little wonder that nine women in ten are troubled with some derangement or irregularity in the action of the organs distinctly feminine. Neglect and wrong living will show themselves first in the most delicate organs of the whole body. With such weakness and sickness so prevalent, it is to be expected that the bearing of children would be fraught with dread and danger. It should not be so, of course. Nature never meant, it to be so. The performance of the highest function of which a woman is capable should not be so. As lives are lived, something else must be done. A remedy must be found. For over thirty years, Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. During that time he has treated thousands of women. He has found in his "Pavorite Prescription" a never-failing specific for female complaints. It strengthens the whole body and when taken during gestation, shortens the period of labor and makes childbirth well-nigh paniless. It also promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child.

THE OSCEOLA MINE FILLED WITH SMOKE AND GAS.

Con Miners Descend to the Twenty fourth Level but are Compelled to Return Without Any of the Dead Bodies.

(REGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.) CALUMET (Mich.) Sept. 9.-Ter miners went down the southermost shaft of the Osceola mine today. They reached the twenty-fourth level and made their way to within 250 feet of the burning shaft, when they were forced to return on account of the deadly gas. Another party went down No. 1 shaft to a depth of 280 feet. but was also compelled to run back. The entire mine was full of smoke and gas, and all hope of finding any of the entombed miners alive was given up. It is thought that the fire is out, but it will be several days before the mine can be cleared of smoke.

The work can probably be fin-ished in six or seven years, while the cost will be much greater than at first calculated, probably reaching $110,000, 000. It is also reported that the com-mission will criticize severely the pre-vious management of the canal.

No Indication That They Will Do Anything Rash.

ARBGULAR ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORT.)

VALENTINE (Neb.,) Sept. 9.—The sensational talk about Rosebud Indians having ordered the agent, Maj. Wright, off the reservation, and other attendant details of the probable uprising on that reservation, are without foundation in fact. There is some ill-feeling among the Indian freighters about a recent cut in the rate of freighting government stuff from this city, the nearest railroad point to the agency, but it is of no far-reaching consequence, and bears a strong resemblance to from this city, the hearest railroad point to the agency, but it is of no far-reaching consequence, and bears a strong resemblance to a teamsters' strike in a city.

For many years Indian freighters have been paid to haul the government stuff from this place to the agency at the rate of 50 conts per hundred. At this rate a teamster would make $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ a trip, the trips being of about one day's duration. Of course he got nothing for his return trip, and this work gave him about $\frac{31}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ a week for himself and team, usually consisting of four horses. Lately the agent decided to cut this rate in two, and it was to this that the Indians objected.

After some friction of the character of a walk-out, or a strike, the agent finally agreed to run up the price to $\frac{3}{2}$ cents per hundred, and to this the Indians agreed. The talk of $\frac{3}{2}$00 Indians having been called in from the reservation to fight for the haulers is not credited, as there is not that many fighting Indians who are out on the reserve are not of the kind who would fight to get work.

The Grand Canyon...

Moran's Famous Painting.

The Grand Canyon of the Colorado River-the great Red Gorge of mid-continent-is confessedly the most stupendous, the most awful and sublime spectacle to be seen on the American continent. It surpasses all the most famous objects in nature, of a similar character, to be found in the Old World. It is, in fact, the one and unapproachable thing of its kind; its unique fame is as wide as are the borders of the Union, and has spread beyond the seas; it is world-wide.

Thomas Moran's famous painting of the Grand Canyon is a great masterpiece of art—the only attempt ever made to paint this mighty gorge on a large scale. His celebrated production is a rare art treasure.

In 1892 Mr. Moran went to the canvon commissioned to make studies for a great picture. He spent months thus occupied in that wilderness of Arizona. Having filled his artistic soul with a grand conception of a grand subject, and made the necessary sketches in black and white, and also in colors, he returned to his New York studio, went to work on his canvas, and finished the famous painting in time for exhibition at the World's Fair in Chicago, where it attracted unprecedented attention. Later the painting was magnificently lithographed by a noted New York house upon the order of the passenger department of the Atlantic and Pacific Railway Company. The reproduction of the original was made under the direct supervision of Mr. Moran, and one stipulation in the contract required that each plate and the color produced by it should be satisfactory to the painter before the work of lithograph printing was proceeded with. It required more than a score of distinct stones and as many separate printings to produce the picture as it is today, and as THE TIMES is prepared to offer it

As a Premium to Subscribers.

Of course, the expense of securing the original and then reproducing it in such a careful, thorough and artistic manner was very great, making the cost of the lithograph far more than the average of such pictures.

The following interesting letter from the lithographers, Messrs. G. H. Buek & Company of New York, more fully explains the skilled and elaborate process by which this noble lithograph was produced:

The Reproduction.

(COPY.)

"NEW YORK, August 21, 1895.

"Dear Sir: * * * The Moran Grand Canyon picture required 21 colors for its proper execution; that does not mean that there are only 21 colors in it, but that we used 21 separate colors in completing the work, and from combinations of one color with another were enabled to get innumerable tints and shades, and to so exactly reproduce Mr. Moran's original as to entirely satisfy him with the work. "Each different color is of course drawn separately on stone and printed separately on the press, so that each sheet of the work ran through our presses 21 times. The process of lithograpy is simple in itself, but hard to explain.

A keystone is first made which outlines every separate change of color in the picture to be reproduced. By taking an impression of this on a stone, the artist is then enabled to see just where the different colors are to be worked.

"If the stone he is working on is to be printed in red, for instance, he sees on the original certain places this red has been used and by following his keystone can easily find where it is to fall on the reproduction. "The matter of combining colors depends on the artist's judgment to a great extent, and his ability in this line marks a good or bad artist, and his work as good or bad. "Some artists with few colors can gain much better results than others using twice the number, depending, of course, largely, as we have explained above, on the way in which the colors are handled. "After the various colors have been drawn on the separate stones, the stones are treated with nitric acid and gum arabic, this fixes the work, and renders the stone, where there is no work, somewhat porous and susceptible to moisture, and as the ink the artist works with is of a greasy composition we then have a surface covered with grease. so to speak, where the work has been put, while outside of this work there is simply the plain

"The stone is then dampened, and after the damping rollers have passed over it, they are followed by the color rollers. "The whole operation, then, is, that where the greasy work is on the stone, the moisture of the dampening rollers will not take, while where the dampness is on the stone the color rollers have no effect, only depositing the color on the greasy portion of the stone, where there is no moisture.

"Yours respectfully,
"G. H. BUEK & COMPANY."

How the Picture Can be Obtained.

Despite the costly nature of this superb picture, THE TIMES has succeeded in securing it for distribution to patrons as a premium. This affords a rare opportunity for people of taste, culture and artistic appreciation to acquire a great historical picture at small cost.

The Lithograph is on a sheet $42x27\frac{1}{2}$ inches over all, the picture itself being $22\frac{1}{2}x38\frac{1}{2}$ inches in size. It may be seen at the counting-room of THE TIMES and is supplied to subscribers (without frame) at the following unequaled rates and upon the attractive terms named:

THE TIMES for three, six or twelve months, with a rare picture of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado included, all for a moderate sum of cash in hand paid, is a prize. The Lithograph cannot be procured from any other source upon the same terms. Apply to or address

OFFICE OF THE TIMES, Los Angeles, Sept. 9, 1895. THE CITY TAX LEVY. Taxpayer n Los Angeles city are not very well satisfied at the size of the tax which satisfied at the size of the tax which has been imposed by the Council. According to the Investor, if the Council had done its duty the tax should have been considerably higher than it is. The been considerably higher than it is. The Investor says:

"The Council, after long struggling against the inevitable, has at last fixed the tax rate for the current fiscal year. The committee, in its report upon which the levy was based, reveals the reason of the hesitation shown by the Council in making so large a levy this year; putting the onus of the blame upon former Councils in pretty nearly the same language as was used in the Investor months ago. The neglect to create sinking funds as required by law has enabled past administrations to pose as economical managers; but in the meanwhile the burden of taxation has been rolling up, which now has to be looked squarely in the face and provided for.

"We pointed out in a former issue that a levy of $1.55 would be necessary, if the Council did its duty in the premises. This duty has been evaded, however, and the levy fixed at $1.45. The committee makes the following remarkable statement:

"Of the bonds of 1870, which were mittee makes the following remarkable statement:

"'Of the bonds of 1870, which were due August 1, 1895, $76,000 was the total face of the bonds due, but provision has been made to provide for the payment of $34,000 of this issue from other sources, otherwise the tax levy would have been about 8½ cents still larger."

"The committee neglects to say from what 'other sources' $34,000 of this issue will be paid. Taxpayers have a right to know. A levy is ordered to provide for $41,952 to pay on these bonds of 1870 which is given as the amount required to pay the balance of the $76,000; whereas the treasurer's statement shows that only $19,150 of the 1870 bonds was unpaid on the 1st of July last. Under what authority, therefore, does the Council make a levy for $41,952, and where is the $24,000 to come from 'other sources?'"

DRIED FRUIT. A short time ago is was announced that some of the most celebrated orchards in the San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys had been and Sacramento Valleys had been leased to Chinamen. It is now stated that this action has had the effect of lowering the standard of quality of the dried fruits produced in that section of the State. It may be that Southern Californa will before many years take the lead in the State in the production of a fine quality of dried fruits. If the horticulturists of this section devoted as much care to the subject as they have to the production of fine oranges, they should have no trouble in taking front rank in the dried fruit market. While Southern California is dividing up its big ranches and extending the area of small farms, the northern and central part of the State seems to be taking the opposite course.

Rapid transportation has brought the ends of the earth very close together, and it must be expected that the strug-gle for a market will become keener from year to year.

GENERAL BUSINESS TOPICS. ITALIAN VINEYARDS DAMAGED.

nsul Germain, at Zurich. Switzer. and, reports to the State Department that immense damage has been done to Italian vineyards by the wine louse. The island of Sicily has suffered most, and an area of 239,361 acres of vineyards there has been wholly ruined, and 156,323 acres partly ruined.

OPENING FOR A SMELTER. Some time ago it was announced that the smelter proposition had been revived, and that the smelter shortly be completed. Since then nothing has been heard on the subject. It is understood that the people who have the scheme in charge are at present endeavoring to sell bonds. Mean-time, the opportunities for the profitable work of the smelter increase from month to month as new mines are 10 to 11 a.m., 3 to 4 p.m. from month to month as new mines are

In an article on the subject in the last issue of the Manufacturer, a monthly publication issued in Los Angeles, Prof. John T. He considers the territory referred to as a most promising field for the business of Los Angeles, as this city is more accessible than any other point where smelters are established. CALIFORNIA MARBLE. There are deposits of marble in various sections of Southern California which would create much excitement and interest a large amount of capital if they were located in almost any other section. Recently the beauty of this California marble has attracted the attention of some people in the East. A prominent architect of New York has been so impressed by its richness of color that he is considering the use of it for interior decorations on a large contract. Some of the wealthy men of Los Angeles who are about to erect residences and business blocks might not only beautify them in a unique manner but also add in the development of local resources by making liberal use of this beautiful marble in the decoration of their buildings. The novement for good roads in city and stimulus within the next few years through the practical efforts and sistance of wheelmen. As the latter ome more and more numerous they will make their influence more power fully felt, and will learn to exert that nfluence where it will do the most good. Nor will they stop at the mere natter of influence, but will contribute money as liberally as their means will allow to aid in the work of road-improvement, when they are satisfied that work will be intelligently and the money thus expended.

Whether the movement among wheelmen for better roads shall ultimately result in the construction of narrow bicycle tracks or in the general improvement of existing highways will depend very largely upon the extent to which boards of supervisors will co-operate in the work. Tracks on which bicycles can be run with comparative ease are sure to be built, eventually, out of our cities in all directions. It will be possible to con-struct such tracks, if they are to be ed exclusively by wheelmen, at a all expense as compared to the cost constructing a good highway suffintly wide to accommodate teams.

If boards of supervisors and rural ite with wheelmen in the construction of thoroughfares, for residents and operty-owners in the country would far greater benefit than any other class from the construction of good roads. But if the bicycle-riders who are certain to comprise a very much larger proportion of the public, within the next few years, than they low comprise—are obliged to raise ney and build country-roads themelves, they will do it, for the roads so great a necessity that they will certainly be built sooner or later. Narrow tracks-say, six feet wide-would ing such tracks, aside from the rightway, need not be great. They would than improved highways to be used atly by wheelmen and teams. No w good a road may be built, avy traffic by means of teams will t up and gouge the surface more or a. Bicycles, on the contrary, im-we the roads over which they move. e cost of maintaining a road used a short time, comparatively, and, while clusively by bicycles would therefore comparatively light, while the cost maintenance in the case of high-sys is a considerable item, even unterested would last indefinitely, with any little expense for repairs, it would identify be better for wheelmen, as a moral proposition, to direct their ef-land, O., having been towed by a steel propeller. This event, as the New York Tribune observes, bids fair to mark new era in canal transportation. The lowly canal-mule is being driven from the tow-path, as is its nobler brother, the horse, from the street-car lines of cities. The Tribune suggests that when the canal-mule is well out of the way it would be a wise plan to turn all the townaths into bicycle roads The suggestion is a good one, and worthy of careful consideration.

They don't have any dread of third, fourth and even fifth terms for the President in Mexico. Gen. The City of Mexico has a new daily norning paper, printed in English and receiving the Associated Press dispatches. It is nicely printed and well written, and is published by the Mexian Publishing Company (Limited.)

Whenever there is a pleasant day in New York the papers of that city make extended and gleeful comment on the inusual event. A few days of California weather would fill them with unspeakable and ecstatic joy.

AT THE PLAYHOUSES.

RURBASE. "The Colonel's Wives," the play now on at the Burbank, is a jolly piece, right jollily played. An immune audience was present last evening, and bubbled over with delighted chuckles and bursts of laughter all through the piece. Anna Parker, as Marjory, the pretty wife, who, though married to the colonel, yet demands a year of freedom before settling down to the bondage of married life, is a vivacious sparkle, who keeps things in a continual stir. She changes her costumes at astonishingly short intervals, and a fresh and pretty wardrobe she proves to possess. In her little impromptu skirt dance, she is exceedingly graceful, and one regrets it is of such brief duration. The simulated lunacy which she indulges in to squeich two ardent lovers, is very cleverly and funnily done, and in the last act, gowned as a crimson streak, she shows herself a devotee of the prevailing fad, by doing some neat work on a bicycle. The BURBARK. - "The Colonel's Wives," ergy and thrift which, when applied to the generously-yielding conditions discovered in California, produced a reward far surpassing experience and encouraging to further effort.

"One very eloquent phase of the character of the dominant residents is seen in the beauty of the city. Wherever there is a patch of ground it is luminous with flowers, and shade and ornamental trees embower the city. An accompaniment of this evidence of culture is smooth streets, beautiful drives. a devotee of the prevailing fad, by doing some neat work on a bicycle. The part of the explosive colonel was extremely well done. Miss Adella Barker, as Mrs. Honeybee, appeared as a new woman in training to "reduce," and drew out many a laugh. Her bloomers of a plaid so noisy that they might be heard a block away, her sweater, gaiters and clubs, were calculated to smite the heart of an ordinary man with terror Miss Anna MacGregor, as ture is smooth streets, beautiful drives, perfect cleanliness on every hand, and a fine taste in architecture. These conal the taste in architecture. These conditions are observable in all the towns in Southern California where Eastern, and particularly New England, people predominate. An inference from all this is that residence in California does not tend to induce indolence, but rather to encourage greater effort, by reason of the larger returns which reward it. "These matters were discovered and more or less enlarged upon by the Half-million Club upon the occasion of its excursion to Los Angeles several months ago, but they cannot be kept too assiduously before the attention of the State. It is the people of Los Angeles that have made their city; they have not waited for it to make them. Until that lesson is learned throughout all California our State will not have taken its proper position in the with terror. Miss Anna MacGregor, as Susan, the resurrection plant, the sup-posed-to-be drowned first wife, was very funny. The three boys from the military school, who all wanted to marry Marjory, added greatly to the fun of many of the situations. Miss F. Addel Nott, who took the part of the Adele Nott, who took the part of the female detective, was rather good to look at, but as she swallowed most of her words, she was not particularly interesting. Richard Barnum as the Rev. Samuel Savage, Sam Charles as Jack McVeigh, and Harry Beers as Uncle Abe, were all good.

ORPHEUM.—Gilbert and Goldie, the ever-popular team of fun-makers, lead off in the bill at the Orpheum this week, a bill, by the way, which is generally much below the high standard of the house. Gilbert and Goldie, however, are as clever as ever. Their running fire of gags, jokes and ditties in their sketch of the English chappie and the American hobo are laughable and entertaining, and they were given the usual noisy and numerous recalls last night. The two recomers, Edward Adams in "Carmencita up to date" and William F. Rochester, ballad singer and joke teller, struck considerable of a William F. Rochester, ballad singer and joke teller, struck considerable of a frost. The Metropolitan Three sang well as usual. Guibal did his tricks of legerdemain with mystifying dexterity and Mile. Ortiz performed her feats uncanny way as last week. Lillian Mason, who is a strong favorite, especially canny way as last week. Lillian mason, who is a strong favorite, especially with "de kids up stairs," sang her descriptive and humorous songs in her own effective fashion and Crimmins and Gore, the long and short of it, set the house roaring with merriment by their incongruous appearance and their incongruous appearance and their ncongruous appearance and their lively business. The same bill all week.

"It is No Wonder."

(St. Helena Star:) A glance at a special issue of the Los Angeles Times impresses us with the fact that it is no wonder that the southern part of the State has been so prosperous. The papers are always putting forth noble efforts to present the bright side of southern life to tourists and homeseekers. The number just issued tells of "Summer Life in California," and is profusely illustrated and thoroughly interesting.

Burned by Gas.

Thomas A. O'Donnell, a well-driller, was badly burned about the head last evening. He was at work about 8 p.m. at the Silent well on Welcome street, when there was an explosion of natural gas from the well. Mr. O'Donnell was immediately taken to Herzfeld's drug store, corner of Temple and Belmont. Dr. J. F. Lemmons dressed the burns, and everything possible was done to assuage the pain. The victim of the accident is getting along as well as could be expected.

(Melena, Mont., Independent:) You don't say! Fruit of all descriptions is so plentiful in California this season that 500 crates' of the finest cantaloupes from the Sacramento Valley were actually dumped into the ocean last week because each crate of thirty large melons would not fetch the beggarly figure of 10 cents. Where was the colored population?

(Phoenix Republican:) The summer of 1895 will have a ghastly record of fire, crime and disaster. Fire, explosions, falling buildings, drownings, shootings and lynchings help to make up the awful list. At the same time the average, year in and year out, is about the same. By the present methods of gathering news nothing now escapes publicity and thus it is that the showing of crime and disaster attracts so much attention.

(Oakland Tribune:) The city of Buf-

ing of crime and disaster attracts so much attention.

(Oakland Tribune:) The city of Buffalo has offered $300,000 by way of smoothing things if the Democratic convention will meet in that city next year. Buffalo is now about the size of San Francisco, has much better streets and more notable public buildings. Besides, it has Niagara close by and the lake in front. But San Francisco has the bay and the Pacific Ocean in front, a cool summer climate, and such a generous hospitality as no national convention will experience on the other side of the country.

(San Diego Union:) Another carload of California fruit has just been started on its way to England. The success of these shipments, of which there have been several this season, has been most gratifying. It is true the fruit has not always arrived in the best condition, and prices, consequently, have not been all that could be desired. Still, taken as a whole, the shipments have demonstrated the fact that, with improved appliances for packing and quicker transportation, California fruits will in future find a most advantageous market in England.

(Marysville Appeal:) The San Jose

rruits will in future find a most advantageous market in England.

(Marysville Appeal:) The San Jose branch of the National Letter-carriers' Association has already shipped for distribution at the convention now being heff at Philadelphia 400 copies of "Picturesque San Jose," contributed by the Supervisors. These fine illustrated books are accompanied by 1000 souvenir boxes of dried prunes. They will be distributed free among the delegates. Each box contains a card with the words "Branch 193, San Jose, Cal., Convention City of 1896." The prunes are fine, fresh fruit. of this year's drying. (Alameda Telegram:) Los Angeles will make a great display at the Atlanta Exposition, and will expend about $18,000 to do so; and still there are people elsewhere in California of the Rip Van Winkle stamp and order who wonder why Los Angeles is the only city in the State that is well known throughout the East.

(Santa Clara Journal:) The Los Angeles papers report that a good deal of annoyance is caused by the presence of fleas about the government building. It has been known for some time that the present administration had lots of flies on it, and now it seems to have blossomed out as a breeder of fleas.

(Tucson (Ariz.) Star.) Spinal meningitis has been traced to the bicycle. The disease had been in existence before the wheel, and the cause was more or less mysterious. Now that its origin has been ascertained, it will be easier to devise a treatment for it. But if the bicycle produces meningitis, it offsets the offense by reducing drunkenness and the consumption of tobacco. A drunken man cannot ride, and the rider is too busy to smoke.

If alcoholic fumes will do what is claimed for them, it will only be necessary for the right man to acompany a carload of our incomparable fruit across the continent, and it will get there as fresh and blooming as the day it was picked from the tree. The cost of the necessary alcomould be the principal drawback.

(Oroville Mercury:) Los Angeles proposes to be represented in part at the Atlanta Exposition by an orange tower thirty-five feet in height, in the center of the California building. Five carloads of oranges are said to have been put into cold storage, from which to replenish the fruit on the tower. After seeing this tower, the average Easterner will be convinced that Los Angeles is the only orange-producing section of the State.

(San Jose News:) There were ninetyfour deaths in Los Angeles in June.
These figures reached the Iowa State Register, and caused the comment:
"What a healthy climate that city must have, when compared with forty deaths in Des Moines during the same month, and with the further fact that the two cities are about equal in population!" If the facts were known, it would probably be found that more to regain health, and too late to derive any benefit from the mild climate of California.

(Ontario Observer:) San Franciscans are working hard to have the Republican National Convention held in their city. In the event of their success it has been suggested that the convention meet at the Sutro baths. The suggestion is not meant as a reflection on the delegates, but is based on the fitness of the place for such an occasion. By flooring the swimming pool ample room would be afforded all taking part in the convention, and the great amphitheater looking down on the baths would accommodate thousands of spectators. From the baths the ocean is not only visible, but the grand eloquence of its ponderous breakers may be plainly heard from the auditorium. The suggestion is a happy one and should have a strong influence in securing the convention.

(Alameda Encinal:) Word comes from Los Angeles that a St. Louis manufacturing firm is collecting wild mustard down in our southern counties, drying it and shipping it to St. Louis, to be manufactured into the mustard of commerce, and sending it back to California, where it is sold in large quantities. This is a serious reflection upon our home manufacturers. But, come to think it over, we remember very distinctly that, many years ago, some one was engaged in this business either in San Francisco or Sacramento, whose product we used in our family, finding it fresher and better than any imported article, but why its manufacture was not kept up and enlarged we de not know. The manufacture of wild mustard here would open up a big, paying enterprise, as the fields are full of it in every section of the State.

At present Kinney is following the profession described by the word "sporting." He is himself a puglist of no mean ability, and has recently had an encounter with an English "pug" surnamed Armstrong, whom he claims to have defeated in five rounds. He further states that he recently conducted a match between Solly Smith, of Los Angeles and Billy Ernst of New York, for a purse of $200. He fails to state however, which gendeman in this match pounded the face of his antagonist in the most artistic and approved manner, thereby winning renown and $200. He may mention that, however, in his next budget.

Kinney, according to his own statement, is making a barrel of money, proposes visiting Dallas when Corbett and "Fitz" exchange civilities and in conclusion desires to be remembered to his many friends in Los Angeles.

J. H. Bridges, the man who was shot by W. H. Clune the evening of August S, was feeling better yesterday than on any previous day since the shooting. Bridges came to the police station in his shirt sleeves, holding a battered bullet in the palm of his hand, and looking very happy. He had just got the lead out of his system.

It will be remembered that Bridges was shot under the left collar-bone, the ball ranging downward. The doctors probed for it, but could not find it. For

But Bridges still felt worried, fearing the bullet would work its way downward into his vitals. It moved in another direction, however, coming to the surface in his back between the shoulder blades. Police Surgeon Bryant cut it out yesterday. That is why Bridges breathes easier. His left arm, however, will perhaps remain permanently paralyzed as the result of the shooting.

"OLD SPORT DAVIE."

He Has Left the Stage and Married

Friends of Actor George Abbott Davison are congratulating him upon his marriage with Dr. Annie Hammell.

Mr. Davison some months ago played an engagement as Old Sport Davie at a local concert beer hall. Mr. Davison is not an "old sport," as his stage name might imply, being, on the contrary, quite a young man. His bride, in fact, is some years his senior, although she, too, is far from being aged. The proprietor of the concert hall speaks highly of Mr. Davison, both as an actor and a gentleman.

Dr. Annie Hammell was the widow of Dr. Walter G. Hammell, who died from the effects of an overdose of morphine about six months ago. She is well known in professional circles, both here and in Philadelphia, where she formerly practiced dentistry. She owns a fine orange orchard at Redlands.

George Fleming, who had just begun work as an extra baggageman and brakeman on the Terminal Railroad, was instantly killed yesterday morning at Terminal Island.

When the train arrived there he uncoupled the engine from the baggage car, but forgot to part the bell cord. Fearing it would be broken, he leaned forward over the platform of the car to turn the stop-cock of the airbrakes. This brought the cars to a sudden stop and before he could withdraw his shoulders from between the bumpers, the engine, which was backing up slowly, struck him, the drawhead literally passing through his chest, crushing the lite out of him.

The engineer could not see him from the cab. The Coroner's jury exonerated

How It is Done. (Marysville Appeal:) People in this ection of the State are sometimes (Marysville Appeal:) People in this section of the State are sometimes heard to express astonishment that Southern California should be gaining so rapidly in population and wealth, while Northern California, possessing greater natural resources to attract, makes no appreciable advancement. The cause is very simple and easily discerned. It does not rest on luck or chance, nor is it alone attributable to the superior energy and enterprise of the people of the lower part of the State. The fact is that they have chance, nor is it alone attributable to the superior energy and enterprise of the people of the lower part of the State. The fact is that they have merely adopted a wise business principle, and are carrying it out intelligently. It is the same principle which causes one brand of baking powder to be used in thousands of homes, while a dozen others, just as good, and perhaps better, remain uncalled for on the grocers' shelves. It is the same principle that gives any article the preference over another of the same principle that gives any article the preference over another of the same kind. It is publicity. A man might make the grandest invention imaginable, and, if modern methods of letting it be known were not employed, the world at large, through ignorance, would be deprived of its uses and benefits forever. Southern California is simply doing that which every successful business man in the present day finds is necessary in order to divert trade in his direction. She is advertising. Not at intervals, and by fits and starts; not in a haphazard, trust-to-luck sort of a way, but carefully, judiciously, liberally and continuously. As an illustration of what is being done, we may mention that Los Angeles alone has subscribed twice as much money to make herself conspicuous at the Athanta Exposition as all the other countles of the State combined. There will be a splendid exhibit of products arranged in the most attractive manner possible. Then printed matter has been secured for distribution to visitors at the exposition, and the money is in bank. Still they are not satisfied that this amount is sufficient, and an endeavor is being made to secure $6000 more.

This fortune did not last long, for with the dwindling of the oil boom, poor investments ate up the riches, but Mrs. Lindley was not destined to suffer long, for her husband, Mark, returned to the fields and devised the present system of pipe lines for the oil transportation, and organized the first of the transit lines. He sold out for a handsome sum and went to Arkansas, where he dropped all his wealth and died of a broken heart three years ago. Since then the widow has been dependent on the bounty of friends, and, tiring of their rejuctant gifts, she proposes to make her way to the home of an aunt in Oregon.

If any doubt existed as to the identity of the man now in jail, it was dispelled, by his meeting with Mrs. McGruder. She recognized him at once. The meeting was an affecting one. After the meeting in the pail Mrs. McGruder was seen at her hotel and said the prisoner was Dr. Fraker beyond a doubt. Asked in regard to the money she had received from Judge Lincoln as a part of her share, she said the sum was about $1200 and it was now on deposit in a bank in Macon county. She is as yet undecided what course to pursue in regard to it and denied the published statement that she had offered to turn it over to the insurance companies.

The study of Chinese history, literature, institutions and character is one which has scarcely been begun by European and American scholars. It offers great possibilities. The recent founding of a professorship of Chinese at Berkeley should do much to furnish workers in this field. Here in Californie, where the Chinese are numerous, the subject will seem to have more reality than in most places.

The habit some people have of throwing refuse of all kinds into the street is a menace to public health, and should stopped. For a specific instance take Temple street, just west of Broad-way. There is a row of little fruit stands, groceries and so forth on the side. The enterprising merchants empty all pickings from their fruit boxes into the gutter, sweep the dirt from their floors onto the sidewalk, and throw dead rats out into the street. When the street has not been swept for a day or two the effect is decidedly un-

A dispatch from Springfield, Mass., quotes Elmer Corthell, "a distinguished engineer and scientist," as predicting, in a paper on "The Growth of Great Cities," read before the American Association for the advancement of science, as stating that Chicago will be the world's second largest city, and have a population of nearly 8,000,000 within a few years. The following is Corthell's estimate of the population of the world's greatest cities in 1920: Lon-8,344,000; Chicago, 7,797,600; New York, 6,337,500; Paris, 3,808,586; Berlin, 3,422,211; Philadelphia, 1,838,160; St. Petersburg, 1,840,333. It is easy to make predictions of this kind. Figuring on the increase in population which Los Angeles made between 1880 and 1890 this city should have a population in 1900 of nearly 250,000, and in 1920 of about 6,000,000, thus placing it fourth on Mr. Corthell's list.

A Masonie Social.

One of the most notable occurences known to Masonry in this State occurred at El Monte last Saturday evening, the event being the conferring of the third degree of Masonry by Lexington Lodge. No. 104, on three brothers, namely: C. B., E. J. and William Dodon, two of whom were twins, and the sons of Hon. W. R. Dodson of that place. Long before the appointed hour tally-hos arrived from the neighboring towas including Monrovia, Pomona, Los Angeles and Compton bringing with them very jolly crowds. After the conferring of the degree, the lodge members marched in a body to the hotel of Mr. Dodson and were ushered into the banquet room, which had been very prettily decorated with roses and hydranges, smilax and palms. Many tosafs were given and the best wishes of all extended to the three young candidates. The remainder of the evening was passed with music, after which the guests departed and it is believed that none will ever forget the eventful evening. One of the most notable occurence

RABBI BLUM.

DENIES THE ALLEGATION AND DE-MANDS THE PROOF.

His Indignation at the Charges Made Course He Will Pursue - The Rabbi's Linguistic Accomplish-

There is no doubt in the matter—Rabbi Blum is thoroughly indignant from the crown of his head to the outermost point of his pedal extremities. The rabbi arrived in the city Sunday morning from a trip to New York city of three weeks duration.

The rabbi learns that during his absence he has been the topic of a very interesting discussion among the memsence he has been the topic of a very interesting discussion among the members of the Board of Education in the public prints, and, for aught he knows, on the highways and byways. He has discovered that in the estimation of some people he is morally the next thing to a leper, that as a teacher or would-be teacher of French, he is tothing to a leper, that as a teacher or would-be teacher of French, he is totally incompetent and in addition to this finds that a committee composed of members of the Board of Education has been appointed to investigate the charges that are silleged to be pending against him. Rabbi Blum left the city, so he declares, with the confidence of the community, with his signed contract in his pocket to teach French in the High School next year, and with a generally roseate prospect before him. He returns to discover the state of affairs already described existing. The rabbi is therefore a very much surprised and bewildered man. When a Times reporter rang the bell at his residence on Figueroa street last evening, he was met at the door by the rabbi, who threw up his hands in dismay when told of the errand, the same being none other than to obtain from Mr. Blum a statement relative to the insinuations and charges of immorality and incompetency which have been made against him in the past several weeks.

"Ohl my dear friend," said the rabbi, "I do not wish to get into the newspapers in this matter. I assure you I am keeping perfectly quiet—perfectly quiet—verseally, "but about the charges—the immorality, you know—"

The venerable rabbi shook his head

"Yes," said the reporter, sympathetically, "but about the charges—the immorality, you know—"

The venerable rabbi shook his head and indulged in a deprecatory shrug. "I do not even know what they are," said he. "How can I tell you anything about them?"

"Then, perhaps," replied the reporter, "I can be of service in relating to you some of the rumors that are afloat concerning your character and competency as a French teacher.

"The prospect of information appeared to please the rabbi, for without delay he ushered the reporter into his parlor and waited for specifications.

"You will pardon my seeming bluntness in what I may say," said the reporter to the rabbi, who waited in ill-concealed eagerness for what he expected would follow. "In plain English, Mr. Blum, it is rumored that you have made a practice of selling throughout the city watches in which were concealed pictures of the basest and vilest sort."

"It's a lie," said the rabbi, hotly. "It's a disatardly, hateful lie," and the rabbi trembled with emotion as he spoke. "I sell such things—I—I—" and he paused for very indignation. "But," continued Dr. Blum, "I know the author of that miserable story. That came from Mr. Loeb, who was formerly the organist of the cohgregation, over which I presided, and who has tried to injure me before by the same story, but with not the slightest success in his attempt."

"It is charged," said the reporter, after a pause, "that you were given $250 to resign your position as rabbi of the Jewish congregation on Broadway."

"False—false!" vociferated the rabbi. "I was presented with twice that szzo to resign your position as rabbi of the Jewish congregation on Broadway."

"False—false!" vociferated the rabbi. "I was presented with twice that amount by individual members of my congregation as a mark of their esteem; but not one cent for any such purpose as you mention."

Dr. Blum was asked as to the reason for his resignation. A shrug of the shoulders preceded the reply of the doctor, which was to the effect that he presumed that the congregation desired a younger man for the position. "You should see," said the rabbi, "the beautiful set of resolutions presented to me by the congregation when I left. That, would settle the question of my resignation."

Dr. Blum was requested to specify his qualifications for the position of an instructor of French, and did so very readily. "You tell me," said the rabbi, "that the authenticity of my French translations is called in question. Why, I have indisputable proof that I translated the Blography of Adolphe isaac Cremieux," a history of a French Jew, written in France by a Frenchman, and printed for me in this city. I am now engaged in the translation of a famous French work for the Jewish Review, which is published in Cincinnati. I have finished the first half of the work, which has been bound and to which will be added the second part when it is completed. I have the manuscripts, in my house, from which I work. I am the correspondent of three Eastern Jewish papers for which I do translations of French. I have my certificate as a French teacher, without which I could not have been elected to my position. As to my accent and my proficiency as an instructor that could only be determined by a trial and decided upon by competent judges of the question, which seems to be in doubt."

It was told to the rabbi that a petition protesting against his retention in office has been prepared and signed by a large number of the Jewish residents of the city, and deposited with a member of the Education.

"There is not a member of the Jewish congregation who has signed it, I am

If the charges can be traced to a specific party, the rabbi declares that he will spend his last penny to prove his innocence and punish his traducers. BRUTAL BELLEC. Arrested for Fast Driving and for

Cruelty to Animals. Charles Bellec celebrated Admission day by getting full, hiring a team and driving about the city in such a reck-less way as to get him into serious trouble. As the result of his little spree he spent several hours in the City Jail, and after getting sober was released only on putting up $25 cash released only on putting up $35 cash bail for his appearance in the Police Court today to answer the charges of Bellec came from Santa Ana recently for the purpose of starting a laundry here. The team he hired yesterday was one of the best in Austin & Record's stable. Having imbibed rather freely he became reckless and drove through the streets at such a rapid pace that Officer Singleton arrested him at the Main and First street crossing for fast driving.

The horses were dripping wet when driven up in front of the police station. They had huge welts on their flanks where Bellec had lashed them. Seeing how they had been abused, Humane Officer Hutchins put the additional charge of cruelty to animals against Bellec.

The proprietors of the team had seen Bellec drive furiously past their stable, and were themselves trying to stop him when he was arrested. They will assist the humane officer in prosecuting Bellec for cruelty to animals.

Possibly in the early days of the '50's and '60s', when Caifornia and her sons, both native and adopted, were new to the sensation accompanying the consciousness of Statehood, the day commemorating the admission of the Golden State into the Union was observed with hilarious enthusiasm, such as befitted the importance of the event and its recent occasion. But the pranks and quips of youth have changed to the sedateness that attends maturity, and while no citizen would confess to a lack of interest in the event and its celebration, the outward demonstra-

ons of interest are not conspicuous, or

SANTA MONICA RACES.

Ponies Get Around the Track

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 9.—(Special Correspondence.) As there was no other programme today for observation of Admission day other than that offered by the races, and business generally was suspended at noon, everybody joined the crowds that wended their way toward the track. The consequence was that the scene when the horses finally got away was an animated one. Besides local contributions to the throng, there were many here from Los Angeles and other neighborling towns.

The first race of the day was the Arcadia polo pony race, one-half mile.

from Los Angeles and other neighboring towns.

The first race of the day was the Arcadia polo pony race, one-half mile. There were five entries, and the ponies finally got away in pretty good order. The track was slow from dust, and the breeze was fresh. Alvord's Jack Pot took the race easily in 0:56½, Waring's Wonder second, Young Shella third.

Pending the Miramar handicap, Arthur Griffin, paced by a tandem, tried his speed against time, but the condition of the track and breeze made it impossible to cut time. He was supposed to be going against 1:05 for the half mile, but only finished in 1:25. The effort will be renewed tomorrow. In the next event there was considerable scoring, but the ponies finally went away well in a bunch. It was a race for Waring's stable from the start, although Loomis's little Chip, with its young rider, made a good showing at the first stake. Young Reta, quite a favorite in the start, went off the track at the beginning of the back stretch, and was out of it, although she was crowded well toward third place in the last dash. Waring's two animals came down the homestretch nicely together, and safely out of the way of Lady Gray, who finished third. Santa Clara took first and Kittiwake second; distance, three-fourths of a mile; time, 1:26.

In the next event for turf stakes the "talent" was knocked out by bad guessing. The Spanish speaking people all put their money on Machado's Sleepy Charlle, playing against the field. The result was a great surprise, for the horses came in with Weber's Hello first, Lucgo's Pavillon second and Machado's Sleepy Charlle third. Distance one mile; time 1:50½.

The last race was for polo ponies. Jeronomie came in first, Little Belle second and John Day Zim third. Distance one-half mile; time 0:57.

VENTURA, Sept. 9.—(Regular Correspondence.) At the Ventura Citizens' Rifle Club meeting the Los Angeles Turnverein Germania Rifle Club won first prize for the team shoot with a score of 428 out of a possible 500, defeating eight teams representing Santa Barbara and Ventura counties. For the individual prizes Joe Singer took first with a score of 49 out of 50; Louis Breer second with a score of 47; Charles Leighton third, with a score of 47. The shooting was done on a Creedmore target. Each of the individual prize-winners came from the Turnverein Club of Los Angeles.

The only circumstance which tends to mar the celebration is the fact that the mar the celebration is the fact that the school trustees in this city issued an order that the public schools remain open, contrary to the established custom on all legal holidays. Friday morning the first intimation that the schools would not close reached the public ear, and the Free Press published the following protest from an old-time resident, in the hope that the school trustees would revoke their order:

the hope that the school trustees would revoke their order:
"Monday, September 9, is California's natal day and a holiday, and is a day revered by all old Californians; and the 'old boys' who made the State and prepared it for the many thousands who now call us silurians and relics of by-gone days, demand that it be duly observed. Men may come and men may go,

may go,

"But the days of gold'
are immortalized in history.

"AN OLD SILURIAN."

But it falled of its object, as the majority of the trustees refused to discuss the matter, and the school children have been deprived of their holiday. Dr. C. L. Bard, president of the Ploneer Society and a member of the school board, made a vigorous pro-

day. Dr. C. L. Bard, president of the Ploneer Society and a member of the school board, made a vigorous protest, but his single vote and voice had no effect on his colleagues.

This action by the school trustees has raised a storm of protest from the Ploneers, Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West and citizens generally. The Times correspondent, in investigating for the motive which led to the peculiar and unusual action of the school trustees, discovered that the whole question of closing the schools to-day was predicated on the question of giving the school children a full holiday during fair week. By keeping the schools open today and closing one day during the fair, the school teachers will not lose any time or salary, as one day will balance the other, legal holidays not being counted as a loss in salary to the teachers. A ploneer of 1849 and who was present at the meeting of the first Legislature at Monterey, in discussing the situation, volced the general sentiment with the remark that he for one "objected to sacrificing the traditions of the natal day of the Golden State in the interest of a horse race." The end is not yet, as the Ploneers are justly indignant at the action of a school board which has set itself up in opposition to a Legislature of the State which, recognizing the historical importance of the admission of the State of California into the sisterhood of the American Union, made September 9 a légal holiday.

Police Personals.

Officers Redfern, Richards, Richardson, Ritch, Robbins, Rohn, Spencer, Stephenson, Stewart and Stites started on their ten-days' vacation last Sunday.

Officer "Bill" Leverich drives the night patrol while Jehu Stites is taking his vacation.

Officer Reynolds is on night call duty at the station while Officer Richardson is taking his annual rest.

Officer Sparks serves warrants and follows the patrol wagon on the day watch during the absence of Officer Ritch.

Capt. Roberts is supposed to be rusticating somewhere in San Diego county. His boon companion, ex-Detective Wallin, looks very lonesome since the captain went away.

Officer J. A. Miller, with his wife and boy, put in part of his vacation at Azusa on the ranch of J. H. Claudius, Mrs. Miller's uncle. Joe is a pretty good shot, but his old uncle knocked him out in target and dove shooting. Joe did get one cottontail. He is back on duty now and the rabbits and doves are safe.

WHEELMEN AT RIVERSIDE. A Great Road Race and Spirited Track Work. RIVERSIDE, Sept. 9.—(Special Correspondence.) This was Wheelmen's day as well as the natal day of the Na-day as well as the natal day of the Native Sons.

In Northern California the wheelmen assembled at San Jose. South of the Tehachepi Riverside was the Mecca. As early as Saturday wheelmen from all over Southern California began to head for Riverside and scores had arrived Sunday. Sunday night the circuit chasers came in from San Diego, and yesterday's trains, both special and regular, were crowded.

Every train was met by the Reception Committee of the Riverside Wheelmen and the Spinners' Club looked after the bloomerites.

and green of the Passdenas was also prominent, as well as the colors of many other clubs.

The new bicycle track was examined by thousands on Sunday and the crowd was almost as big as during the races a day later.

All arrangements were complete and the fourth annual meet of the Riversides was a success in all ways.

ASSOCIATED CLUBS.

While the timers, scorers and umpires puzzled over the times the delegates from the various clubs assembled in Odd Fellows' Hall to meet as the Associated Clubs of Southern California. The first stated meeting of the board of governors of the Associated Clubs was called together by Robert Grey of the Ontario Wheelmen, he being the acting president, chosen at Pomona Union meet last month.

In the absence of Secretary Groce of Rediands Cycling Club, Charles Fuller Gates of The Times was chosen secretary and the report of the Pomona meet and committee meetings since was read, also the constitution and bylaws, drawn up by the Organizing Committee.

The first annual election was then held and as president W. A. Cornell of the Riverside Wheelmen and C. F. Gates of the Roamers' Road Club were nominated, but both refused to accept the office and C. C. Monaghan of the Orange County, Wheelmen was unanimously elected. Stanley J. Castleman of the Riverside Wheelmen was elected first vice-president and the other officers chosen were: Vice-presidents, Robert Grey of the Ontario. Wheelmen, E. J. Hornbeck of the San Diego Wheelmen and W. A. Kelley of the Citrus Wheelmen of Los Angeles; secretary, L. C. Groce of the Redlands Cycling Club; treasurer, E. R. Braiey, Crown City Cycling Club, Pasadena.

The constitution. bylaws and road rules recommended by the Organizing Committee were adopted and then the meeting adjourned to meet the first Saturday evening in October at the club rooms of the Roamers' Road Club of Los Angeles.

The board of governors of the Associated Cycling Clubs is composed of the following well-known gentlemen: Redlands Cycling Club—Joseph Hoskins, H. A. Luther. Riverside Wheelmen—M. M. Milice, S. J. CYCLE TRACK OPENING.

At 1.30 o'clock the new park of the Riverside Wheelmen was the most interesting place in Routhern Californie.

the first heat, all but two dropped out, and at the start of the third lap little McNamara almost collided with Pacemaker Johnny Cowan, and yet saved himself by cutting inside of the pole. From there on it was a close race between McNamara and Tabor, and was finally won by Tabor; time 2:331-5. The class A mile, open, saw the meeting again of Frazee, San Diego's pride, and Whitman of this city. Frazee is a new man, but shows remarkable speed.

McStay tried the new trick of jumping the pacemaker and setting the pace. Then on the second heat the pacemaker went up front again amid cheers. Whitman had gained the desired position and finished the second lap with Cox next to him. On back Miller went up and then Frazee went to pass, but Whitman kept the lead into the home stretch. Cox made a grand spurt, shooting in for the pole and almost fell trying to avoid a collision. Frazee was also trying to win, and it looked like a dead finish between the three. Cox held his lead and won by a half wheel over Frazee, who beat out Whitman, while the crowd yelled and the band played for Cox; time 2:21 3-5

The second heat of the class A mile chine shot ahead, and Miller kept near, beating Ruess by two wheel lengths. Tabor third, Jones fourth; time 2:20.

In the final of the class A mile Frazee gets the tandem and all bunch on the backstretch. Jimmle Stander spurts way ahead and gets the tandem. Whitman takes it on the second turn of the second lap. Hewitt jumps the tandem on the second lap, but Cox takes it on the second turn, and the race becomes very exciting.

COX'S FINE FINISH. COX'S FINE FINISH.

Into the grand finish Cox went with Hewitt, each even, and they drove the tandem into the bank, but fortunately there was no fall. Frazee shot to the outside for position, and was just too late, as usual. Cox just won with Hewett second, Whitman third and Frazee fourth; time 2:18 4-5. Pasadena claimed the first three, and San Diego the fourth man.

the first three, and San Diego the fourth man.

The first heat of the mile, class B, was tandem-paced by S. G. Spier and Casey Castleman. Holbrook took the lead and Billy Burke came next, Todd third, Schmidt fourth, McCrea last. Schmidt and McCrea jumped the line half way up the back stretch, "Lest time around, and McCrea came out in front, when the whole field got to scorching. Burke, in a new red suit, tried that famous spurt of his on McCrea, but the man with the highly-trimmed racing suit sent his little red wheel along too fast, and came home amid vociferous cheering, for McCrea wore the colors of the Riversiders today. Burke held a good second, and a beautiful bunch for nearly a lap before the final sprint for home began. The field of eighteen starters had lost several and many were pocketed by being behind others who were slower. Taylor very sensibly took the outside and thus got around the field, and then "Old Hoss" Taylor came home like a veteran. King of San Bernardino, with forty-five yards, second; Yeoman, twenty-five yards, third, and Williams of Alhambra, forty-five yards, fourth; time 2:171-5. THE BIG RACE.

THE BIG RACE.

The final of the mile open, class A, was of course the big race of the day. The first two heats had allowed McCrea, Ulbricht, Burke, Lacy, Hatton, Holbrook and Todd to qualify, so there was to be a big race. Castleman and Spier on the tandem were placed at the seventy-five-yard mark to pace, and as they had been joked some about their speed the tandem cut out an awful pace and hone of the racers were able to catch it. Todd had the best of the starting spurt, though Burke pressed him hard. At the end of the first lap the officials told the tandem to slow up, and about that time Hatton, with McCrea trailing, jumped and passed all, even the tandem. McCrea then sprinted the whole last quarclass-A men in the lap race trial-heats and allowed them to ride one mile instead of two.

Yeoman got second and third laps and so won with 7 points. Miller won second each time, getting 6 points and Wasson, with 4 points, got third place; time 2:30.

In the second heat of the class-A lap race there were nine starters. It seemed to be Taylor's race from the start, and he won it by taking first two laps, thus getting 6 points. Whitman finished second the first two times around and got 4 points, but Rodriguez of the Roamers, who won the stime prize in the road race of the morning, won the third lap and finish of this heat and so scored 4 points, thus tieing for second. Cox got fourth with 8 points; time 2:26 2-5.

A RECGRD RIDE.

Herbert McGrea consented to rile an exhibition mile ngainst time, paced by Hatton and Schmidt on a tandem. McCrea could have easily followed a faster pace and on the final lap passed the tandem and came home alone in 2:99.

The prettiest race of the day was the final heat of the two-mile, class A, lap race, which was won by the Roamer's Road Club champlon, Guillino Rodriguez with Yeoman second and Cox third. Taylor won the first two laps, Yeoman the next and Rodriguez and Yeoman tried a new trick in lap-racing and jumped the bunch when resting from the spurt. Their lead was so much out Whitman, while the crowd yelled and the band played for Cox; time 2:21 3-5

The second heat of the class A mile had Yeoman, Standfer, Bayer, Ruess and Miller of Los Angeles and a host of other starters. Cowan paced. The beautiful field, in all colors of uniform, made a grand sight.

It was a procession for two laps, then Ruess gave the pacemaker a shove with his hand going up the back the second time, and got a cheer from the crowd. Taylor and Hewitt on the outside started the sprint at the tape on the bell tap. Hewitt of Pasadena jumped the bunch half way up the back and was never headed. Boyer, with a fine finish, surprised all by taking second almost on the tape. Jimmie Standfer got third; time 2:24 2-5.

The Roamers' Road Club of Los Angeles kindiy "furnished the class A pacemakers for the day and for the final of the novice race. John Cowan and "Reddy" Garrison came out on a racing tandem.

Ruess got the tandem, with Miller next and McNamara trying hard yards behind to get up. The pace pulled the crowd out, and only the first two stayed with the double machine. At the turn into the homestretch for the last time Miller took the outside and tred to spurt by the tandem. The double machine shot ahead, and Miller kept near, beating Ruess by two wheel lengths. Tabor third, Jones fourth; time 2:20.

In the final of the class A mile Fraze gets the tandem and all bunch on the gets the tandem to flow on the last on the homestretch Billy Burken of the came up, passed all, even the tandem. McCrea then sprinted the whole last quarchet, but he would passed all, even the tandem. McCrea then sprinted the whole last quarchet, but a bunch on the mild passed all, even the tandem. SAVED BY BRIGANDS

N EXCITING ADVENTURE IN OLD MEXICO.

BY GEORGE A. CUTLER, M.D.

The six burros that had brought us pace, were brought up with such a sud and myself, who occupied the rear seat of the diligencia general, pellmell into the lap and onto the belongings of the orpulent old senora, who, together oth her bundles, baskets and hairless xican dog, occupied the entire front

Mexican dog, occupied the entire front seat.

The cloud of dust that had followed in our wake, in the rapid drive down the fighline, soon settled in and around the coach, making it impossible to discern objects at any distance. As soon as we could recover our equilibrium we cautiously presented our heads at the window, expecting to be met with the gleam of musket or pistol in the hands of brigands. Nothing more formidable met our gaze, however, than the figure of our wiry little cochero, who, with his goat-skin breeches, with the long, tangled, yellow hair on the outside, his head lost in the great, wide sombrero with its heavy mass of tinsel cord, and a serape faded and old now, but which bore evidence of having been worked in gold and tinsel by the deft fingers of some fair senorita, doubtless for some favored lover, certainly not for our cochero, for it was a world too large for him, but helped to make the figure more ludicrious. As he descended from his perch, muttering to himself (for our Mexican drivers do not relieve themselves in oaths, on occasions of this kind, as do our more civilized drivers of the North, his comical figure, as it presented itself through the haze, suggested that of a satyr, rather than that of a human being.

"What is the matter, Vasquez?" I saked.

sented itself through the haze, suggested that of a satyr, rather than that of a satyr, rather than that of a human being.

"What is the matter, Vasquez?" I saked.

"Matter, senor, don't you see the bridge is gone?"

I could see through the cloud of dust the dim outline of the deep arroyo, but a few feet in advance of us, and drew a deep breath of relief as I said: "Is that all?"

"Is it not enough that we must go ten miles from our way to cross this arroyo?" said Vasquez. It was our second day out from Vera Cruz, and the twenty hours that I had spent cooped up in the hot, dusty diligence, did not make an extra ride of ten miles a luxury to be greatly desired, but the sense of relief from what we had surely thought was a"hold-up," (which in Mexico means bloodshed as well as robbery,) made us feel, for the moment, rather pleased than agrieved that it was no worse than a broken bridge. We settled back in our seats, not, however, until, we had made our humble apology to our fellow traveler for our precipitate descent upon her and her belongings and a careful examination of the latter to see if we had broken or injured anything.

The business that I was on was urgent, and it was important that I reach my destination at the earliest possible moment. The firm in whose interest I was traveling were the owners of some valuable silver mines in Central Mexicot hat had yielded the most satisfactory returns until some six months previous. About that time Don Ricardo Garcia, who had been the superintendent of the mines ever since they had been purchased by the present obmpany, was killed while defending a burro train of bullion from an attack of brigands.

The administration of Don Ricardo had been so honest and satisfactory that his cousin, Don Manuel Garcia, had but little trouble in becoming his successor. The young man who was my companion on the journey was a trusted employee of the company at verse cruz, and I had been instructed to take him with me, and, if I found any companion, Senor Morales, in his place.

We reac

We reached the mines early the next morning and, contrary to our expectations, found Don Manuel evidently expecting us. It was the desire of the company that our intended visit should be kept a secret, but I had been detained at Vera Cruz a week by sickness and by some means Don Manuel had been apprized of our intended visit.

Deeming further secrecy unnecessany, I at once went to work in my investigations, in which I had little if any, assistance from the superintendent himself.

Such books and accounts.

must close down on the mines unless they are honestly managed, and that would mean distress and suffering for you and your families. What will you do? Will you stay with us and work as you did under the old superintendent, Don Ricardo, or must we stop all work and let the mines lie idle?"

"We wish to continue the work," shouted several voices.

"Ir am glad to hear you say so, the company will pay you the same wages they have paid in the past, and will grant you all the concessions they have garded. Are you satisfied with that?"

"We are fully satisfied," replied one of the men.

"It have brought this gentleman.

granted. Are you satisfied with that?"

"We are fully satisfied," replied one of the men.

"I have brought this gentleman, whom you all know, with me, and I am instructed to make him your superintendent. I want every man who will agree to do faithful work under him, and obey him, to step to this side."

Every man, except those who surrounded Garcia, stepped at once to the place designated. As soon as Garcia saw that a large majority of the men had accepted Morales, he turned and left us, followed by the men who had stood by him. As he went, however, he turned and gave me a look from his sinister black eyes that I knew boded me no good.

As Morales and I were returning to our jacal we saw Garcia and his men standing near the adobe, but when they saw us approaching they disappeared behind the house.

"Garcia means us mischlef," said Morales.

"Net you" I said "all bit between"

"Not you," I said, "all his hatred seems concentrated on me."
"I saw the vindictive look he gave you as he left the meeting, but in a few days you will be gone, and then it will be he and I for it, but I think I am enough for him."

be he and I for it, but I think I am enough for him."
"Bravely said, Morales, and you have all of the men on your side; you must put the men he discharged at work at once. I must not do it, for I want them to feel that they owe it to you."
"Thank you; rest assured I shall employ every means in my power to make myself solid in this business. But fook you well to yourself. You have a deadly, as well as a dastardly enemy who will lose no opportunity to secure his revenge."

"I know my man and I shall keep a who will lose no opportunity to secure his revenge."

"I know my man and I shall keep a sharp watch on him," I replied.

I had made up my mind to start on my return the next morning, but as the wives and daughters of the miners had been making great preparations for a good fandango the next evening, in honor of the new superintendente, it needed but little persuasion on the part of Morales to get me to delay my departure for one day. I could finish up some writing that I yet had to do, and I might strengthen his position by remaining over to the ball, though I knew it was endangering my own safety, for it was the hated el Americano, and not my Mexican friend, that stood in danger. It was late in the afternoon of the next day, all my work being satisfactorily done, and feeling that inspirit that one naturally feels when relieved of a heavy weight on the brain, that I left the jacal and sauntered out to enjoy the solitude alone.

The day had been hot and sulting the start and sulting the contents of the same sulting that in the day had been hot and sulting the same sulting the same sulting the same sulting that inspirit that one naturally feels when relieved of a heavy weight on the brain, that I left the jacal and sauntered out to enjoy the solitude alone.

The day had been hot and sultry, but as evening came on, bringing with it the delightfully cool and bracing evening air, as it ever does in this tropical clime, I permitted my thoughts, for the first time, to drift from the cares and perplexities of business to the beauty and charm of my surroundings. The lofty peaks of the distant mountains, some of them covered with the eternal snows, others darkly wooded to the very summits: the rich valleys carpeted in green and the blue ranges in the distance, with here and there the sliver glitter of the tiny stream, as it trickled down the mountain side, or reflected the huge boulders and stately pines in the little lake formed in the valley below. As the lengthening shadows grew longer and longer, as the sun crept slowly behind the distant hills, the outline of mountain and valley grew more dim in the gathered mist that floated over hill and plain, and I almost felt that I was in spirit land, but when the silence that had been almost oppressive was broken by the soft, sweet notes of one of the songs of the country, accompanied by the light tinkle of the guitar and the soft music of the bandola, with nothing to relieve the gathering darkness save the glimmer of the dim yellow light of the agave torch, flitting from jacal to jacal, doubtless in the hands of fair senoritas, preparing for the evening dance, but seeming to me more like elfin sprites, and making the illusion complete.

I had seated myself on a huge boulder and sat lost in deep thought. The moon my reverie by the sharp report of a gunshot and the thud of the ball as it struck the rock at my side. Another sharp report came in quick succession, and this time the ball whistled by my ear. I leaped to my feet and made a rush toward the spot where I had seen the flash of the last shot. I could hear the patter of the feet, as the would-be murderers fled, for I could tell that there were several of my assailants. I was unarmed, and I saw the folly of an attempt at pursuit, so I wended my way toward the adobe, from whence I could hear the sounds of music and laughter, indicating that the fandango was in full blast. I found Morales enjoying the darke, and I resolved to say nothing to him regarding my narrow escape from the assassins' bullet. He was dancing with a pretty Mexican girl, but as soon as he saw me he dropped her and came rushing up to me.

her dark eyelids and course down her cheek. "Good bye, Gaudalupe," I said. She did not reply, but turned her head aside and Morales led me nway. On the road home he told me why he had been so precipitate in rushing me off. "It seems that we are always getting into trouble," he said; "Gaudalupe, I learned tonight, is betrothed to Jóaquin Gonzales, a desperate fellow who lives at the little village where we left the dillgences to come here. It is rumored that he is a contrabandista, and is not only a desperate villain, but inordinately jealous. It is said that Gaudalupe does not care for him, but she is dependent upon some distant relatives, and they have forced him upon her. A friendly Indian told me, a few moments before I spoke to you, that Garcia, who, as you perceived, did not attend the fandango, but who evidently kept a close watch on it, had either gone himself, or sent a courier to warn Gonzales of what was transpiring here. He had tried to get this Indian to go, and, from what he told him, the Indian is confident that he is laying some plan to do you an injury."

Neither Morales or myself had ever seen Gonzales, in fact had never heard of him before, but we knew enough of Garcia to feel assured that he would leave no stone unturned to accomplish his revenge.

We slept rather late the next morning, and it was fully 9 o'clock before I

Garcia to feel assured that he would leave no stone unturned to accomplish his revenge.

We slept rather late the next morning, and it was fully 9 o'clock before I got off. Morales accompanied me, as also did another of our trusted men, to the village, some six or seven miles distant, where I was to take the diligence. It was nearly noon when I reached the little town, and as I had sent word a few days before that I should want the conveyance at this time, I found it all in readiness for me. It was a dilapidated old concern, and the driver was a large, coarse fellow, with but little to say, quite different from our loquacious little cocher, Vasquez. I climbed in at once after bidding Morales an affectionate good-by. The cochero cracked his whip, and threw stones at the leaders (a favorite way of starting a team in Mexico,) and we were off.

I waved my hat out of the window to Morales as long as he was in sight, and then settled back in my seat. I was the only passenger, and felt a sense of loneliness, such as I had never felt before.

The taciturn driver scarcely deigned

The taciturn driver scarcely deigned to answer the few questions I asked him, but he kept the burros at a good gait, and I congratulated myself that I should soon be in the busy world again, and settled myself as comfortably as I could in my seat, to sleep away the hours, if possible.

It was just getting twilight as I woke up from my long nap; the diligence was of twas just getting twilight as I woke up from my long nap; the diligence was standing quite still; the driver was on the ground in front of the coach. In the distance ahead of us I could see a number of lights, indicative of a village, while just opposite to us I could discern the outlines of what appeared to be a haciends.

"What is matter, driver?" I asked.
He made no reply, but motioned me or come to him.

I did so, and found the pin that seured the double-trees was gone.

"Have you no rope or chain that you an bind it?"

"Have you no rope or chain that you can bind it?"

"No, no: I have none."

"Cannot you fix it so we can get to that village " said I, pointing to the lights. "It cannot be over three miles."

"No, senor, we must stay here. Don Ramon Contreras runs this hacienda, it is good. We stop here."

By this time he had finished unhitching the burros and started for the hacienda. I saw no alternative except to follow, so gathering my things together I followed him to the house.

I saw no sign of life on reaching the adobe except an old bent hag, seated on the veranda, who did not even raise her head as I passed in. The driver met me, and, taking part of my baggage, showed me to a small room opening on the veranda. Fortunately, Morales had provided me with a lunch, and I seated myself on a bench, the only plece of furniture in the room, except the bed, and did ample justice to the chile con carne and other eatables that my thoughtful friend had provided for me.

After I had satisfied my hunger I my thoughtful friend had provided for me.

After I had satisfied my hunger I sauntered around the adobe (which, with the outbuildings, must have occupied nearly a half-acre of ground) in hopes that I would meet some one, or in some way break the dreadful solitude of the place, but not a soul did I see, even the old woman that I had seen on the veranda has disappeared. At length I went back to the room, tired and restless, with a feeling of dread and uneasiness oppressing me I could scarcely account for. So strong did this feeling take possession of me, that at length I resolved to leave my baggage and start for the village. Acting on this impulse I went out again and looked, in the direction that I knew the village to be, for the lights that I had seen early in the evening, but not the faintest glimmer of a light could I see.

"Debaw." I muttered that we had to be controlled to the faintest glimmer of a light could I see.

"Pshaw," I muttered, "this is all folly. If I start to find the village the chances are that I will not go in the right direction; besides, I have no grounds for this foreboding; I will go back and go to bed." I re-entered the room and fastened the door as best I could, and tried, in vain, to find some way to fasten down the window. I sat on the bench for quite a while, listening for any noise or. signs of life, but at length I lay down on the bed, tired and worn out. I did not undress, but laid my pistol in easy reach. I thought over the incidents of the day and reasoned on the folly of my fears, when there was not the shadow of a foundation to base them on. I fell 'sleep at length, and I must have slept soundly, for it was long after midnight when I was awakened by a noise in the room, and I saw in the dim moonlight the figure of a man bending over my bed. With one hand he was feeling over the bed, as if for my body, and in the other upraised hand I could see the glitter of a large knife. I tried in vain to think where I had laid my pistol, and yet I felt that the least movement on my part would mean instant death.

As the moving hand touched my body the figure gave a start, and the knife was raised directly over me. I involuntarily closed my eyes with a rhudder, and almost felt the deadly stroke. At that instant the tramp of horses' feet as they came charging on the house, the yells of the riders and a discharge of firearms broke the hitherto deathly stillness of the night. My assailant fied hastily out of the door, and I leaped from the bed and quickly made my way to where I saw the moonlight enter the room. It was the open window. The assassin had doubtless gained access to the room in this way, and had then unfastened the door to make his exit easy in case of resistance. It took me but a moment to leap to the porch and rush around the corner of the house. Just at the edge of the porch I nearly fell over the body of the old woman who doubtless had been killed in that first volley.

The horsemen were eviden learned from what was said that it belonged to one of their richest citizens who was away on important business, but was expected home every day. In the excitement of the start, I was quite forgotten. I was glad of this, for I was anxious to get away, for I feared that if I was detained to the investigation that must follow, I might be kept for days, even weeks. As soon, therefore, as the party left, I began my search for some one to take me to the next town, where I could take the diligence for Vera Cruz. I was fortunate in finding a conveyance, and, after writing a note to the alcade, informing him that urgent business demanded my presence in Vera Cruz, and requesting him to forward my luggage at the first opportunity, I took my departure, and we arrived at our destination in good time. I wrote to Morales from this place, and gave him as full an account of the incidents of my trip, and the narrow escape from death of the night previous, as I could. The next day I took the diligence for Vera Cruz, and arrived there without further incident of importance.

I waited anxiously at Vera Cruz for a letter from Morales, for I had requested him to get the full particulars of the affair of the haclenda, and in due time I received a letter from him as follows, as near as I can remember it:

"My Dear Comrade: I received your letter in due time I me and I searcely

Ventura Contractor's Sureties Are

VENTURA, Sept. 9.—(Special Dispatch.) One more "high roller" has come to grief and levanted for parts unknown, leaving numerous creditors to mourn because of his "sporty" method of living and hasty departure. The story, briefly told, is as follows: At the spring school-district elections bonds were voted to build new school-houses at El Rio and Pleasant Valley, and the trustees proceeded to advertise for bids. Simon Cohn, John Grubb and John Donlon, trustees for the El Rio district, accepted the bid of J. H. Johnson, a contractor of Ventura, the price being $525$, and secured themselves by exacting a bond for $3600,

Johnson, a contractor of Ventura, the price being $5258, and secured themselves by exacting a bond for $3600, with Leon Cerf and City Marshal F.
S. Cook as sureties.

The contract stipulated that the work was to be completed in ninety days from June 19, 1895. The job is at this writing about half completed, and Johnson has drawn $2629 of the stipulated price, as per contract.
When Trustees John Rice and Adolph Camarillo of the Pleasant Valley district opened the bids for their school buildings it was found that J.
H. Johnson's bid of $1140 was the lowest, and to him the contract was awarded, with Sheriff Charleboise and Senator Orestes Orr as sureties, in the sum of $2800, that the building would be completed in seventy days from August 15, 1895. This work is in about the same condition as the El Rio contract, and Johnson has drawn on account $1035.

September 1 the trustees of the two districts notified Johnson's bondsmen that the work was getting behind, and urged them to hurry Johnson up, or they would be called upon to make good their bond. This led to an investigation, which developed that Johnson was paying more attention to other things than to his business interests, and he was called on for an explanation, which developed that Johnson was paying more attention to explanation, which he failed to furnish.

Friday night Sheriff Charleboise took the matter in hand and made a search for Johnson, who had been "under cover" all day, and finally located him in a notorious resort. The Sheriff, by urgent measures, forced Johnson to yield up $500 which was in his inside pocket, and left him, with the promise that he would furnish a full and satisfactory explanation of his methods on Saturday.

Neither Johnson nor the explanation has materialized to date, and it is now

THAT OF THE NATIONAL EDUCA-

Active Efforts are Being Made to Secure It for Los Angeles Next Year—A Communication to Be Addressed to the Directors.

If sturdy and strenuous effort will secure the next meeting of the National Educational Association for Los Angeles, then the matter may be considered as already settled. Superintendent Foshay, in conjunction with Prof. Plerce of the State Normal School, has been untiring in his efforts to bring the been untiring in his electric to the strongest sort of pressure to bear upon the Executive Committee of the association, which has the decision of the matter in its hands. He has addressed private letters to the various members of the committee, in which the advantages of Los Angeles as a location for the association's meeting, have been set forth in glowing terms. Not satisfied with this, Prof. Foshay has prepared a document in which the entire matter from start to finish is gone over, giving a history of the inception of the movement to obtain the meeting for this city, and presenting in detail the reasons why Los Angeles is the ne plus ultra of cities for the entertainment of the educators at their mammoth meeting. The document reads as follows:

"The committee having in charge the matter of securing the location of the next meeting of the National Educa-matter of securing the location of the next meeting of the National Educational Association in the city of Los Angeles begs leave to submit for your consideration a statement of its case.

"At its last annual session, the Southern California Educational Association, by unanimous vote, passed a resolution inviting the National Educational Association to hold the session for 1896 in Los Angeles. Similar invitations were formulated by the City Board of Education, the Merchants' Association, the Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce. These, together with the invitation of the Governor, the State Board of Education and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, were, by the undersigned, formally presented to the honorable board of directors of the National Educational Association at Denver at a meeting held to consider the invitations from a very superintendent. tors of the National Educational Association at Denver at a meeting held to consider the invitations from various cities of the Union. A ballot was taken to indicate first, second and third choices of place. On this Los Angeles led for first choice. A second ballot was then taken for first choice only, the vote being limited to the cities previously designated as first, second and third choices. Again Los Angeles led. The whole matter, with the record of these votes, was then referred to the Executive Committee, as is the custom of the association, to insure that proper railroad and hotel rates might be secured, and other provision made for the comfort and entertainment of the association.

"This action was taken as a result of "Inis action was taken as a result of a fair presentation of our case, based chiefly on these conditions:
"First—Los Angeles is a city of 90,000 people accustomed to entertain many thousands of visitors every year. An attendance of 15,000 members can be handled easily.

An attendance of 15,000 members can be handled easily.

"Second—The hotels will make special rates not to exceed $1, $2 and $3 per day for members of the National Educational Association.

"Third—A railroad rate of less than one fare for the round trip will be secured for members of the association.

"Fourth—Centrally-located session-rooms, accommodating from fifteen hundred to fifty-five hundred persons each, and, in the aggregate, not less than twenty thousand people, are at the disposal of the association.

"Fifth—Los Angeles pledges 5000 members from the State of California alone.

"Sixth—Genevous members can

"Sixth—Generous provision will be made for thorough announcements of the meetings in the press of the country, and especially through all the educational journals.

"Seventh—Los Angeles is so situated as to enable attendants upon the meeting to enjoy a wider range of pleasure excursions for trifling expense than can be indulged elsewhere in America. An hour by rail will take the pleasure-seeker to three famous beaches—Santa Monica, with its matchless surfand wonderful wharf; rare Redondo, with its famous pier fishing and noted hotel, and Long Beach, whose velvety sands and shelving shore make it at once an almost unrivaled bathing and driving resort. An hour and thirty minutes over the Mt. Lowe railroad, the daring engineering of which is unapproached, will take one 3000 feet above the sea, amid mountain scenery unsurpassed in grandeur. "The above, and many other opportunities make Los Angeles a most desirable location for the meeting in 1896, when members of the National Educational Association will be accorded a California welcome such as thousands enjoyed at San Francisco in 1888.

"Final action by the Executive Committee of the National Educational Association will be taken in October, Our local committee is in receipt of letters from all parts of the Union, urging that every legitimate influence be brought to bear upon the Executive Committee to induce them to determine this matter in accordance with the ex-that every legitimate influence be brought to bear upon the Executive Committee to induce them to determine this matter in accordance with the expressed preference of the board of directors at the Denver meeting. These letters have been the more urgent since the location of the National Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor meeting for 1897 in California makes it impossible for us to entertain the National Educational Association a year later, as was suggested by a member with whom our city was second choice. "Will you kindly favor us with an expression of your personal choice, and, if in favor of accepting California's invitation, will you write personal letters to President N. Dougherty at Peoria, Ill., and to Secretary Irwin Shepard at Winona, Minn., urging upon them the wisdom of at once designating Los Angeles, that we may begin active preparation for such a reception of the National Educational Association as shall stand unrivalled in its history."

The signatures of Prof. Foshay, City Superintendent of Schools, State Superintendent Black, Prof. C. H. Keyes, president of Throop Polytechnic Institute, Prof. E. T. Pierce, principal of the State Normal School, and Prof. Earl Barnes of Stanford University, will be attached to this communication, as the committee appointed by the Southern California Educational Association to represent the interests of Los Angeles at the last meeting of the association in Denver. A copy of the document will be forwarded to each member of the board of directors, who will be requested to communicate with the Executive Committee as to his choice in the matter, and also to notify Prof. Foshay of the action taken by the directors to whom the paper is addressed. In addition to this Prof. Foshay requests that any and all who have an interest in securing the meeting for Los Angeles, and who have a personal acquaintance with any member of the board of directors, address such members privately and thus add to the weight of influence which will be brought to bear upon the Executive Committee. The name and address of each director is here given.

MINING NEWS.

MUCH ACTIVITY IS MANIFESTED IN RIVERSIDE COUNTY.

Good Properties Being Uncov The Copper Workings at Globe are Increasing—An Unsuccessful Trip to Idaho.

In Riverside county the interest in mining matters still continues, not only over new prospect holes, but at the mines which have been worked for some time. At the Santa Rosa mine, where a ten-stamp mill has been in operation, and good money being made, men have been put to work clearing away for an additional ten stamps. F. T. Sutherland, representing one of the iron firms of San Francisco, was on the grounds last Saturday, and took the order for other machinery, which, with the ten stamps additional, will double the capacity of the mill. The boilers are to be changed to burn oil, and a tank with a capacity of 6000 will double the capacity of the mill. The bollers are to be changed to burn oil, and a tank with a capacity of 6000 gallons—a carload—is being constructed at the works. At the depot at Perris, another tank, with a capacity of two carloads, is being constructed. A carload of oil arrived Saturday for the mine. These improvements are expected to be completed within twenty days, when fifteen or twenty more men will be put at work in the mine. One day last week $450 was cleaned up in this mine. At the Good Hope there are thirty-five men constantly employed by Receiver A. H. Naftzger. This mine is making money. A very rich pocket was struck a few days ago. The Alice will start up this week with Menifee, Wilson and J. R. Cheatham as managers. This mine has five stamps. It is said that there are more than one hundred and fifty men now prospecting in this mining district, and country immediately adjoining, aside from those employed in the mines.

A little more than one year ago the Old Dominion Copper Company shut down the smelters at Globe, and with the exception of a few men who were kept at work in the mines that great industry has been at a standstill, and there has been much anxiety and expectancy as to when operations would be resumed. It is now said that the plant at Globe is to be largely increased and at an early date, just as soon as machinery can be shipped from the East and placed in position. About $350,000 worth of new machinery will go to Globe, and when it is all in operation the stream of copper that will flow from the Mountain City will probably double any former output.

A man recently returned from Washington camp, in Arizona, expresses himself as being greatly surprised at the magnitude of the mining operations carried on there, not so much at the number of men, for they were few, but at the amount and quality of the ore turned out.

It is reported that A. J. Tingfman of Tingman & Holland of Indio, has sold

Tingman & Holland of Indio, has sold his interest in several properties in that district, including a half interest in the Pioneer stamp mill, to Los Angeles men for $25,000. News comes from San Bernardino county that the Yolande mine in Inyo

News comes from San Bernardino county that the Yolande mine in Inyo county, principally owned in Redlands, has been bonded to H. S. Sherard, representing a San Francisco company, who propose to extensively develop the mine at once and treat the ore by the cyanide process. Tests so far made indicate that the cyanide process may be successfully used.

Among the recent surprises in Arizona, none are more agreeable than the sudden development of riches in the Coarse gold mine, twelve miles north of Wickenburg, in the richest gold section of the known world. A little over a year ago this prospect, which is now down but 100 feet, was discovered by some Mexicans, and temporarily it was called the Mexican mine at Wickenburg, but some months ago the claim was secured, half by purchase, half by bond, and it is now the property of Dave Goldberg, Gus Hirschfeld and Julius Lieberman. Many nuggets from the thirty feet of quartz have been taken out, one in particular that was sold for $125.

J. G. de la Cuesta, M. A. Botello and Florencio Ruiz have returned to Santa Barbara from Idaho, The object of their visit was to look over the gold fields, and pick up any of the yellow stuff that could be found conveniently, and without an owner. They had a nice trip and lots of sport, but the most preclous metal they saw was in a bank. They report that there veniently, and without an owner. They had a nice trip and lots of sport, but the most preclous metal they saw was in a bank. They report that there were about two hundred miners in the placer districts around Florence, and a hungry lot they were. They even stole a frying pan belonging to the outfit of the party from the south, and they had no mercy on the newcomers. The report comes from San Diego that Senor Corrales, who, with Manuel Riveroll, has been developing rich gold claims at Zarogoza, forty miles east of Ensenada, has sold his interest in the property to B. L. Harding for $15,000 cash. Mr. Harding has arrived from Ensenada to purchase machinery, which will be put up at the mines and developing continued. Other claims in the district are owned by Americans and Mexicans, who consider the Zaragoza country one of the richest on the Coast.

San Bernardino county is coming rapidly to the front in the mining world, especially in gold mining. New discoveries are being made every day and the richest kind of ore brought to light.

Advice comes from Calico that the Advice comes from Calico that the borax mines are eclipsing everything in the way of mines on the Desert. It is said on good authority that the mine is paying 10 per cent. clear.

Prof. N. A. Bibikov, a prominent Russian geologist, located in New York city, is making an examination of the properties of the Yellow Jacket Mining Company, located in Lemhi county, Idaho, and largely owned in Salt Lake City. The Yellow Jacket is a gold probosition, producing at the rate of $25,000 per month. The ore deposit of the Yellow Jacket is similar to that of the Homestake in Dakota, but the grade is higher, averaging $15 per ton, and all free milling.

free milling.

The Husted mine, in the Hassayampa district, owned by Husted & Goff, was recently sold to Messrs. Bashford and Keating for the snug little sum of $15,-000. The mine is on the same ledge with the Jersey Lillie and bids fair to develon into a good producer.

with the Jersey Lillie and blds fair to develop into a good producer.

The Grass Valley Tidings says: "A mining man in Grass Valley noticed the article in yesterday's Tidings concerning the organization of a big company to work a collection of mines on the San Bernardino Desert, showed our reporter a letter wherein the correspondent spoke of owning eighteeen properties in the same part of the State. The mines in question are in the Slate properties in the same part of the State. The mines in question are in the Slate range of mountains, on the dividing line between Inyo and San Bernardino counties. The gentleman had taken ninety-five pounds of ore to Los Angeles, where he had obtained a yield of eight and one-half pounds of gold. These reports indicate that there must be a pretty fine gold beit in Southern California.

A MODEL COACH.

Novel Evidence to Be Introduced Against Col. Bradbury.

Some developments of a highly in teresting character, it is learned, will be made known in the trial of the case in which Ostiano Ocampo has sued Col. John Bradbury for $25,000. It will be remembered that the plaintiff, who is better known as "Tommy" Ocampo, brought suit May 16 lest against the defendant for damages alleged to have been sustained from injuries resulting from careless and reckless driving of a coach by Col. Bradbury, near Ventura, on May 25, 1894. The allegation was to the effect that Ocampo accompanied the defendant and party on a trip, which was to be from Los Angeles to San Francisco by a four-in-hand coach. It was further alleged that the defendant went on this trip for "pleasure, recreation, great ostentation and show."

A demurrer to the complaint was submitted and overruled. The defendantion and show," as they appeared in the complaint, and, by consent of all parties interested, the words were stricken out.

On August 6 last the defendant filed an answer to the complaint, denying specifically all the allegations made. The case is now at issue, and the trial is to be held in October.

J. Marion Brooks, Esq., who is attorney for the plaintiff, returned Sunday night from a trip to the scene of the accident, where he went, he says, to obtain evidence for use in the case. He proposes to follow the example set in the trial of the Durrant murder case in.San Francisco and have models prepared with which to illustrate as graphically as may be the accident.

A model of the coach used is to be shown and in it will be placed French dolls, representing the positions alleged to have been occupied in the coach by the several members of the party. Photographs of the place of the accident will also be introduced in evidence. The evidence, Mr. Brooks says, will show some interesting events of the trip from this city to Ventura and on along the shore of the ocean to the scene of the uses, about four miles from Ventura. teresting character, it is learned, will be made known in the trial of the case in which Ostiano Ocampo has along the shore of the ocean to the scene of the upset, about four miles from Ventura.

This place, he says, is where the road, which most of the way follows close to the water line, runs on a cut made in the bank. This cut is such as to in the bank. This cut is such as to elevate the roadway about ten feet above the sand below. At this place Mr. Brooks says he proposes to show, as claimed, that Col. Bradbury recklessly turned the horses to one side, overturning the coach from the bank, instead of keeping ahead along the road.

The place where the coach fell, he says, is in soft sand, else some of the members of the party would probably have been killed. As it was the plaintiff alleges that the coach fell on him dislocating his hip and inflicting permanent injury.

OME AND FRIENDS FOR POOR

Wrong Buggy—An Electric Hond to Altadena Begun—A Dislocated Shoulder—A Broken Hend.

PASADENA, Sept. 9 .- (Regular Correspondence.) There is no charity, far or near, more worthy of the liberal support of our citizens than the Cleve-land Home, in South Pasadena. It was enough to soften the hardesthearted yesterday to see the kindly old lady, Miss Cleveland, leading her fourteen little waifs, four of them girls, along the streets, in double file, to Sunday-school. Most people have but a faint idea of the hardships and but a faint idea of the hardships and self-denials that are suffered to maintain this home for orphans in our midst. If, while men are giving thousands of dollars to foreign missions, they would more often remember such institutions as the Cleveland Home, there is no doubt the greatest good would result to all. It would be a safe investment. Miss Cleveland would probably be grateful for donations of any description, such as food, fuel and clothing, and, of course, money is always acceptable, and will be made to go a great way.

TENNIS PARTY.

TENNIS PARTY.

Miss Alice Markham gave a delightful tennis party to the members of the Carlyle Tennis Club today. About twenty young people were present, and their light summer attire and the gay decorations of the courts made a charming picture of youth and beauty. An exquisite luncheon was served at the noon hour, and the courts were lively all day with the ball and racket. Some of those taking part were: Fred Nash, Raiph Arnold, Charles Groesbeck, Neal Taylor, Bert Chadwick, Al Park and Rob Lacey. The singles were won by Fred Nash, after a close contest in the finals with all Parker. The doubles were commenced, but will be finished tomorrow.

A new packing-house will be busit at Covina and possibly one at another station on the new rallroad. The meeting was addressed by Secretary Collins and Mr. Moorehouse and the spirit of the day left no doubt that the co-operative plan has gained great strength among the orange growers of this valley during the year.

Plans have been drawn by a Los Angeles architect for a new brick building at Azusa joining the hotel property on the south. It is to be 75 feet front and 70 feet in depth. It will be built by G. H. Bonebrake.

An excursion of 700 people left Covina Monday morning over the new Southern Pacific line, bound for Santa Monica. It was complimentary to the citizens who had contributed to the right-of-way fund for the new Covina road. The tickets were issued free by the local committee on right-of-way, J. H. Coolman and J. E. Clarke. The excursionizal made short stops at the Soldiers' Home and at Port Los Angeles, the large crowd spending most of the day at the bath-house at Santa Monica, returning in time to retire at the proper hour after participating in the biggest eyent, of this kind ever enjoyed by our people.

The new building for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Azusa is now about half completed, the walls of beautiful granite having reached the top of the window frames. It will be built by the First Baptist congregation on Azusa avenue at a cost of over $3000, all of which is subscribed. The work will be done within the hext two months.

At the hotels, too, there is evidence that the season is not over. The races probably have contributed somewhat to this appearance of things, but there are also more permanent guests than usual on the registers, and the agents are still renting summer cottages to people from the interior.

The races have brought many visitors, and, as the banks and public offices have observed the day, and the business houses closed at noon, the attendance has been large—much larger than a year ago. FERNANDO, Sept. 9.—(Regular Correspondence.) To the average enterprising citizen of Los Angeles the advancement and growth of that city and its environs is an ever-interesting theme and one to which he can never do justice. Many indeed are the start-ling transformations that have been wrought out by scientific irrigation wrought out by scientific irrigation within late years. It is held by many that Riverside presents the most striking instance in Southern California of the marvelous changes effected by the water cure. But if one will take the train to growing and thrifty little Fernando he may well exclaim: "Yea, verily! Fernando, has indeed been reclaimed from innocuous desuetude." Fifteen or twenty years ago the country near Fernando was a barren waste, without house or tree, and was considered almost as worthless as the Mojave Desert. But thanks to the ingenuity of man and the unitring efforts of those holding the prosperity of Fernando as above all else the waters of Pacomia and Tehunga canyons have been turned upon this arid plain, and the desert made to bloom and clothe tiself in green meadows and fields of waving grain. Over fifty miles of Iron pressure pipe delivers the water along the streets for irrigating and domestic purposes and add to this the flow from a number of artesian wells and you have as complete a water system as is found in Southern California. within late years. But still it is an undeniable fact that there is vast room for improvement in Fernando. A new depot is needed badly. Lately the depot question has received a decided impetus and there is some talk of a committee waiting upon the railroad officials at an early date armed with a monster petition.

There has not been any great stir in real estate circles here during the summer, but a fair number of land transactions have been recorded.

SPECIAL SCHOOL TAX LEVY FOR SAN BERNARDING COUNTY.

Extensive Burglaries Committed by Residence Burned at Etiwanda-

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 9.—(Regular Correspondence.) The special school-tax levy for this city and the outside territory embraced in this dis-trict, shows an increase from 64 cents to 90 cents. The subdivisions of the special school tax last year and this are as follows:

INFANTILE BURGLARS. Two little girls were arrested Saturday evening, on the charge of burglary. They are the daughters of a wealthy citizen named Miller, residing at the corner of Base Line and F streets, and are aged 12 and 17 years, respectively. Their mother is an inmate of the insane asylum. They had looted the residence of Gus Landers, a printer in the Times-Index office, and had taken everything that would naturally attract the eyes of children, including silverware and a Bible. They also took a leg of mutton, and that was found cooking in the pot at Miller's when the arrest was made. The officers also found a pair of trousers taken from the rear of A. Jonas & Bros.' store, and innumerable articles missing from private residences in different parts of the city. The younger child has been placed in the convent by Father Stockman. What disposition will be made of the elder child is not yet determined! Two little girls were arrested Satur

SERIOUSLY BURNED. Word has been received in this city of the destruction of the residence of C. C. Steiner, at Etiwanda, yesterday, just before noon. The fire caught in the kitchen, presumably from the stove. Mrs. Steiner was badly burned about the upper portion of the body and head, and, as she is a woman upward of 60 years of age, the result is still in doubt. Mr. Steiner was burned about the hands in rescuing his wife. The house was totally destroyed, but some articles of furniture were saved, including a piano, an organ and a sewing machine. The loss is placed at $1500; insurance, $300. Dr. Stiles of this city, who was summoned to attend C. C. Steiner, at Etiwanda, yesterday city, who was summoned to attend Mrs. Stiner, says it will be several days before the prospects of her recov-ery can be certainly known. SAN BERNARDINO BREVITIES.

The will of the late H. M. Willis has been filed for probate. He left his property, including $5000 life insurance, to his son, H. M. Willis, Jr., in trust for himself and the other heirs. The will was executed September 17, 1892. Col. and Mrs. Adolph Wood have returned to Squirrel Inn to spend the re-mainder of the summer.

The town in the way of celebrating Admission day, save a tally-ho crowd that were swiging around the corners pretty lively this afternoon, was very quiet, indeed. No business houses except the banks were closed, and the departure of many from this place for Riverside and other points this morning made the duil appearance of the streets more noticeable.

W. S. Shirley and son, Willie, arrived from Carrolton, Mo., last evening, and will henceforth reside here. Mrs. Shirley had remained in Pomona since their visit last fall, Mr. Shirley going back to dispose of some business affairs, preparatory for this step.

R. F. House, who has been on the sick list for a day or two, is again about, ready for business.

A nine-pound baby girl is reported as having arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Mathews of this city.

SANTA BARBARA. The Naples Postoffice Robbed-

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 2.—(Regular Correspondence.) The postoffice at Naples, eighteen miles from Santa Barbaia, was robbed about 3 o'clock Mon-day morning. It is supposed to be the work of the same gang that went through the office at Summerland a few through the office at Summerland a few weeks ago. The burglars entered the building, also occupied by a store, through a rear window; they troubled nothing but the money-drawer, from which they took $27 in coin and a few dollars' worth of stamps. The officers have been looking into the case today, but so far no clew has been found. The postoffice was a small affair and somewhat isolated. The Naples schoolhouse was also entered.

Saturday night she was sitting in her home, alone as usual, and imagined she heard people outside the building. She thought they were trying to break into the house. She grew desperate, finally, and, seizing the lamp, threw it into one corner of the room. She then ran to the door and opened it, thinking the blaze would frighten her enemies away. There have been no new developments in the Idaho murder mystery. J. G. de la Cuesta has telegraphed twice to Lewiston, the nearest telegraph station to the scene of the reported tragedy, but so far has not received any confirmation of the report. They know nothing beyond the published accounts.

Mrs. L. Richardson has returned from a visit to her former home at Vallejo. The Water Committee was busy today looking over the district northwest of town, selecting the places where the experimental wells will be sunk.

The Alcatraz Company has received an additional order for 700 tons of asphaltum, from New York.

REDLANDS.

REDLANDS, Sept. 9.—(Regular Correspondence.) During the past few weeks a number of lottery schemes have been conducted in Redlands, and although in reality it has been nothing less than gambling, and has been looked upon as much a violation of the law as was the Louisiana Lottery, no arrests have been made and nothing done about the matter. Now, however, the moral sentiment of the community is waking, and it is understood that arrests will follow if another lottery is conducted, provided sufficient evidence can be obtained to convict.

REDLANDS BREVITIES.

J. J. Suess was kicked in the head this morning by his three-year-old colt, a gash about two inches in length being cut above the left temple, which required four stitches. He was attended by Dr. Hill. It seems that Mr. Suess was leading the colt by a halter, and in front of Worthington's place on Orange street the animal became unmanageable, letting his heels fly, striking his owner with such force as to sound like the report of a pistol.

WENT H THE CIRCUS.

FROM HIS HOME.

His Mother Thinks He Was Kidnaped by the Circus People for Exhibi-tion as a Side-show Freak-Has Only One Lung.

The circus went away Sunday morning, and little Johnny Rogers went with it, so his fond mamma surmises. Johnny is a one-lunged freak, 12 years old, and small for his age. His peculiar deformity, which is due to a remarkable surgical operation per-formed by Dr. MacGowan several years ago, is Johnny's fortune, from the dime-museum proprietor's point of view. Jonny has probably gone to seek that fortune. He has, at least, been missing from his home since Saturday night, and his mother, Mrs. urday night, and his mother, Mrs. Amanda. Rogers, thinks he was abducted by the circus people. She so reported to the Sheriff yesterday, and asked that official to help her to recover her boy.

Mrs. Rogers also applied to Attorney Appel for earlies in regard to the mat-

Mrs. Rogers also applied to Attorney Appel for advice in regard to the matter. He counseled her to go to San Bernardino, where the circus went from here, and, with the assistance of the San Bernardino officials, make a personal search for her missing offspring. She did not act on this advice yesterday. The probabilities are that before she can get there now the circus will be at Phoenix, Ariz., its next stopping place. The San Bernardino officials have been telegraphed to look for the boy, and it is possible he will be found and sent back to his mother.

Mrs. Rogers lives in Sacontal San

he will be found and sent back to his mother.

Mrs. Rogers lives in Sonoratown. She is a Spanish woman, a niece of Jose Mascarel. Her late husband, the father of her boy, was an American. In Dogtown, where the widow and her son formerly resided, some of the neighbors yesterday were unkind enough to say they would not spend a nickel for his recovery, if Johnnie were their boy. They hinted that he was crooked in conduct, as well as physique, and ventured the opinion that if he went with the circus he did so of his own volition. The mother, however, sticks to the theory that he was kidnaped. She loves her boy just as much as though he were physically whole, and is shocked to think that his deformity should be exhibited for the purpose of making money. She will, therefore, spare no effort to have him brought home, and his abductors brought to justice.

It was rumored yesterday that the circus men also tried to kidnap a young son of Mr. Rheim, living at No. 905 Date street. When Mrs. Rheim was asked to verify the rumor, she called her little flock of eight about her, counted them, and said none was missing. She had heard of no attempt to steal one of them.

AN UNEXPECTED MEETING. Brother and Sister Meet After

Years of Separation. It was a strange train of circumtances that brought William F. Dunn and his sister together in Los Angeles. They met last Thursday for the first time in twenty years, save for one meeting at the Chicago World's Fair wo years ago. Last week's meeting entirely unexpected on both sides.

Mr. Dunn formerly lived in Christian county, Ill. Five years ago his wife and one of his children died of consumption. Fearing that the disease sumption. Fearing that the disease might some day develop in his two remaining children, who were frail little things, a boy of eight and a girl of nine, he resolved to bring them to California. Like many Eastern people, he knew nothing of California's infinite variety. We thought one part of the State as nothing of California's infinite variety. He thought one part of the State as good as another, and all alike. But after a few weeks spent on the coast of Humboldt county, in the extreme northern part of the State, it became evident that the bleak sea winds and damp air of the region were not the thing for children with an inherited tendency to consumption.

So he bought a horse and a spring wagon, and the little family started out to seek a home. They followed the coast for 800 miles, across fertile valleys, up among the hills, now near the sea and now inland. At last they reached Monrovia, in Los Angeles county. Up in the mountains, 3000 feet above sea-level, they homesteaded 160 acres of government land. The spot is just east of Big Dalton Canyon, not above sea-level, they homesteaded 160 acres of government land. The spot is just east of Big Dalton Canyon, not far from Glendóra.

For eight months the family dwelt in its mountain nook in idyllic happiness. The children were in perfect health, strong and rugged and brywn. Mr. Dunn began to clear the land and set out trees, and commenced a two-story stone house. He and his children did all this work themselves. One day, excited by the sudden appearance of some wild animal, he seized his gun hurriedly, and, in some way, a brass shell exploded, shattering his left hand. Thenceforth manual labor was impossible. Mr. Dunn had taught school for thirteen years in the East, and so his thoughts naturally turned to resuming that work. He wished to put himself in touch again with educational thought, so he determined to enroll himself as a special in the Los Angeles Normal School.

Thursday morning Mr. Dunn came to town

Normal School.

Thursday morning Mr. Dunn came to town. He went straight from the depot to the Normal school and enrolled his name. Then he strolled up into the big assembly room and sat down to watch the people passing in and out.

A few moments later Principal Pierce came in and asked Mr. Dunn to step down to the office. Mr. Dunn followed the principal downstairs—and there sat a sister whom he had seen but once in twenty years. She had arrived from Colorado that morning to enter the Normal School, driven straight from the depot to the building, and, as it happened, her name was the very next to her brother's. Mr. Pierce noticed the similarity of the names. He called her attention to it and so brought about the meeting.

Neither knew the other was in the city, or had any intention of entering the school. Mr. Dunn thought his sister still in Colorado. She knew he was in California, but had no idea in what part of the State. And so fate led their footsteps to that unexpected meeting. Mr. Dunn returned to his ranch the same afternoon with the intention of bringing the children to the city in a few days.

"The Rosecrans ranch people always keep their table well supplied with fruit. Today they sent us English and black walnuts, pears, quinces, apples and some Muscat grapes. The San Diego Chamber of Commerce shipped us a box of lemons. Walter Benedict donated one of those peerless Cahuenga watermelons, a sixty-pound one, grown without irrigation. Then H. G.
